Carl A. Farm: The Second Generation

VERN ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

PITMAN (Schuylkill Co.) — Bucolic.

Like a faded picture of a turn-of-the century homestead, the Carl A. Snyder farm in the northeastern corner of Schuylkill County appears to be part of the earth on which it sits.

Excepting utility lines and paved roads, the farm seems to rise naturally from the southern face of a hump of land that separates two small valleys, each with its own meandering stream.

The farmstead is in synch with the mix of woods and hilly, sloping fields.

The place is the headwaters area for the 30-some mile Mahantango Creek, which runs west, widening as it travels to the Susquehanna River.

It is its own world: A mix of mountain and meadow, swampy humidity and crip cool air.

There are wild raspberry patches, old stone piles, and game-holding thickets, old fence lines and waterways which were never channelized, or tiled or plowed

Ira and Cass Boyer were honored by members of the York County Holstein Association with his induction into the club's Hall of Fame.

Boyer Named To York Holstein Hall Of Fame

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

SHREWSBURY (York Co.) — Ira Boyer is the newest member of the York County Holstein Hall of Fame.

Boyer was named county Hall of Fame recipient during the York Holstein Club's annual meeting November 4 at the Shrewsbury Fire Hall. He and his wife Cass accepted an engraved tray marking his induction to the prestigious group and his name was added to the Hall of Fame plaque displayed at the county extension offices.

An Adams County native, Boyer grew up on a dairy and general farm near East Berlin. The family

FDA Approves Use Of Monsanto's BST

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The federal Food and Drug Administration on Nov. 5 gave its approval to a form of commercial bovine somatotropin (BST) manufactured by Monsanto Co.'s agricultural group, but it won't be available to dairy producers until next year, pending a 90-day moratorium imposed by the U.S. Legislature this year.

Approval of the protein hormone used to stimulate a lactating cow to produce additional milk had been expected for months. It is the first biotechnological product approved for use in creating a food product.

The BST used by Monsanto is produced by genetically altered bacteria, similar to the production of insulin used to treat diabetics.

In addition other versions of injectable BST, there are a number of other biotechnological products awaiting FDA approval, such as a longer lasting Flavr-Savr Tomato, produced by Calgene Inc.

It is far too early to speculate on the impact of the drug on the dairy industry, according a variety of sources contacted this week.

The approval of BST by the FDA follows more than a decade of research into the effects of BST, and at least eight years work by Monsanto and other biotechnological companies to show that a form of the protein hormone BST produced by genetically altered bac-

Survey Indicates Biosecurity In Question When Fighting Pseudorabies

First Of

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

KINZERS (Lancaster Co.) — Abe Fisher remembers when it got ugly.

It was June 1980. Thirteen swine herds were identified as pseudorabies-positive in the region after the disease spread into southeastern Pennsylvania in mid-April. A moratorium had been issued by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture later that month to prevent a possible "shotgun" spread of the virus as a result of breed events at the state farm show. Six herds, by June 21, had been depopulated. Producers had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Information about how swine herds could have gotten the disease, and how it was transmitted, was nonexistent. A survey was released by the department of agriculture a year later, when it was becoming more difficult to control the disease, and when many more herds were infected.

Now, in 1993, 120 herds remain under quarantine for the pseudorabies virus (PRV), according to Fisher, chair of the PRV Eradication Program and president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council.

Another survey, this one conducted by Penn State's Veterinary Science Department and sent to 759 swine producers in Lancaster and Lebanon counties in mid-August this year, has been assembled. Its mission: find the answers to how PRV is spread.

The survey results have been assimilated, according to Dr. William M. Sischo, assistant professor in the department. Of the 759 surveys sent out, 580 were returned by mid-October. There was a 76.4 percent response rate.

Many procedures regarding biosecurity remain in question, and attempts to keep the spread of PRV may be in jeopardy, on some farms. The answers to some of the questions, in many ways, are alarming and shocking:

- On question 29, what is currently required of personnel (including visitors, employees, and family) who enter swine facili-

Egg Quality Assurance Program

John H. Schwartz, Ph.D.
Lancaster County
Extension Director

The Pennsylvania Egg Industry took a gigantic step forward last month when it approved the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP).

The program is the result of almost one year's discussions on how egg producers may reduce the risk of producing eggs contaminated with Salmonella enteritidis

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NATIONAL CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

SUBJECTIVE ELOQUENCE

One hundred and thirty years ago on November 19 the President of the United States delivered a dedication that fell flat. His listeners were silent, perhaps stunned by his briefness, though after a few moments they responded with restrained applause. Newspapers across the country buried his discourse on inside pages while devoting front page coverage to the two-hour oration by the man who shared the podium with the President. The Chicago Times called the President's address "silly, flat and dishwatery." However this much maligned speech has been revered by succeeding generations. Few people today would fail to recognize these opening words. "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation."

Speech is the mother, not the handmaid of thought.

— Ivins

TIP OF THE WEEK

Don't double the salt when you double a recipe — use only half again as much.

EARTHWISE

Sluggish drains are very annoying, especially when guests are coming. But caustic drain cleaners wreak havoc on the environment while unclogging your drain. Try this homemade formula. It will keep your drains running freely, and it's gentle on Mother Earth. Pour ___ cup baking soda, ___ cup salt and ___ cup vinegar down the drain in that order. Close the drain until the fizzing stops, then flush with boiling water.

SPECIAL CREAMED ONIONS

2 pounds small white onions, peeled water
1 tablespoon butter, cut up
1 can cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup light cream
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup shredded mild cheese

Cook onions whole in lightly salted boiling water until almost done (20 to 30 minutes). Drain. Place in greased 1 quart casserole. Dot with butter. Blend soup with cream and nuts; pour over onions. Sprinkle with cheese and bake at 350° F for about 30 minutes or until cheese is melted and lightly browned.

Makes 4 servings

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Cold with rain and snow clearing west then more rain snow mountains.

SOUTHEAST: Clear and warm south, rainy and cold north, clearing then showers and variable.

OPINION

Dramatic Change

Late last week the Food and Drug Adminstration (FDA) approved recombinant bovine somatotropin (BST) to be used on dairy cows to increase milk production. (See story Page A1).

After nine years of testing and on-farm trials with a lot of discussion from farmers, milk handlers, and consumer advocacy groups, now you can use it. And FDA officials considered it so safe they declined to require identification labels for milk and meat from treated cows even though consumer groups urged them to do so.

What really makes this newsworthy is the fact that this is the first agricultural biogenetic product to go on the commercial market. After the 90 day waiting period, Monsanto will begin to take orders for their trademarked "Posilac" product.

Just how many orders they will get remains to be seen. Many farmers have said they will not use it on principle. To inject a cow for medical reasons is one thing. To give the needle to a cow to increase production may not be acceptable to many farmers.

In addition, many milk handlers have said they will not accept milk from herds with treated cows because of their fear of consumer reaction even though there is no present test to prove cows have been treated. For all practical purposes, milk and meat from treated cows is identical to production from untreated cows.

In the end, we think the on-farm use of BST will be based on economics. The cow that is milking 90 to 150 pounds of milk per day is already milking her heart out. To try to get additional milk out of her would be counter-productive. But the cow that in mid-lactation drops production below acceptable levels will probably be treated with BST to economic advantage on many farms.

The real story in the advent of the commercial availability of BST is the opening of a trail of new biogenetic products that will change the way we farm. Even now we have corn test plots with genetically engineered plants that kill corn bore when the little pests eat the leaves. Dairy cow embryos have been cloned so that we soon should be able to grow a whole herd of heifers from a 50,000m dam that are genetically identical.

It takes our breath away to think about the rapid change in agriculture we look for over the next 10 years. In fact the change may be so dramatic that today's problems will be replaced with needs we haven't even thought about yet.

Through it all, we believe the dedication of the farmers and agri-business to produce safe food in an environmentally conscious world will continue to make Americans the best fed people in the world.

To Provide Foot Baths For Dairy Cattle

Foot problems may be debilitating to cattle.

When their feet hurt, cows stay off their feet. They are reluctant to walk to feed bunks and pastures and their feed intake declines. Also, milk production and conception rates decline while the incidence of ketosis and twisted stomachs may increase.

Foot problems may be caused by physical injuries, nutritional deficiencies, diseases, and infectious organisms. To help prevent foot infections, farmers are encouraged to have cattle walk through foot baths periodically. This should start in the fall of the year before foot problems become severe.

Foot bath solutions of copper sulfate, zinc sulfate, or tetracycline have been fairly successful. Consult your veterinarian for specific recommendations. The success rate may be improved by switching back and forth from one solution to another.

Also, keep the foot bath clean. It should be changed every 100 to 200 cows or when it becomes dirty. Walking cows through water, spraying cows' hooves in the parlor, and having the cows walk through the bath as they exit from the stable or parlor helps clean cows' feet before they walk through the bath. This helps to extend the useful life of the foot bath solution.

To Evaluate Tunnel Ventilation

Many farmers are reading and hearing a lot about tunnel ventilation. It is a very effective way of keeping animals cool during heat spells.

However, there are several questions you need to ask yourself before investing in a tunnel ventilation system:

- Are you building new or are you able to do sufficient remodeling to fit the engineering requirements into a relatively long and narrow building? A low and flat ceiling is required. Also, facilities that are square or too wide are generally not cost effective to tunnel ventilate.
- Are you able to implement an all-in, all-out production unit or use it in a breeding or gestation building? If not, then tunnel ventilation probably is not right for you. Ask your veterinarian what the maximum age spread may be in a single building without compromising herd health.
- Are you willing to improve your management skills to make sure the building is being properly ventilated? Tunnel ventilation requires more manual control and equipment must work all the time. You must be prepared for electrical or equipment failures.
- Do your pens lend themselves to tunnel ventilation? Open gating type pens maximize tunnel ventilation's effect. Solid partitions in your building may lock you into another ventilation system.
- Will you be able to effectively combine fans and other equipment of tunnel ventilation with your winter time ventilation system?

To Feed For Rumen Development

One of the goals of feeding calves is to encourage rumen development.

Grain, not forage, is the most important feed for proper rumen development of young calves and for meeting their nutrient needs. As calves grow older and are consuming a few pounds of grain per day, they may be induced to small amounts of good quality, palatable forage.

Young grass or grass/legume hays are generally preferred. Dry hay is preferred over silage because it is difficult to keep silage fresh when it is fed in small quantities. Dry hay is also preferred over pasture because young rapidly growing heifers may not consume enough dry matter when feeding on succulent feeds. Yearlings, on the other hand, may rely more heavily on pasture and corn silage.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

SOMETHING MORE
November 14, 1993

Background Scripture:
Genesis 29: 1-30
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 130

When we first meet Jacob, we are not favorably impressed by him. Esau, his brother, might have been rash and stupid, but nothing can excuse Jacob for the sneaky opportunism and sheer deception he practiced in order to get from Esau his birthright and his father's final blessing.

If Jacob's escape off into the wilderness of Paddanaram had been the end of the story, his name would not be worth preserving. But that was not the end of the story and, fortunately for everyone concerned, there was something more to Jacob than what was evident in his neighborhood.

There are lots of times when we write-off people like Jacob. Something about them rubs us the wrong way. Perhaps they have acted in a sneaky way and not straight-forwardly. Or let's suppose that they have been temperamental, jealous or selfish to us. We are likely to limit our contact with people like that as best we can, an understandable response.

DIFFERENT VIEWS

But we ought not to be too quick to think that we have adequately judged the essential character of another person. The other day someone indicated that they saw me as "a patient and gentle person." But I have to admit that there are almost certainly people — not necessarily a small group — who see me as anything but "patient" and "gentle". So which of these views is the right one? Probably both — and neither. In different situations and with different people I am likely to be a different person. And if that is true of me, it is true of others, too. So, Jacob was a scoundrel, but there was something more to him than that.

This "something more" becomes evident in a new situation — and, as often it is in life, that it is away from home! Meeting some shepherds at a well, he wants to know why they are waiting idly there. The answer: the stone covering the well is purposely too large and heavy for just one or two persons to move. So they have to wait until all the shepherds together can move it. But when Rachel, his cousin, comes, "Jacob went up and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother" (29:10). Selfish, scheming Jacob performing a spontaneous, benevolent act! (How different Rachel's view of Jacob than the one held by his brother, Esau.)

A DIFFERENT JACOB

But the most notable difference is evident to us when he deals with his uncle Laban. Offering to work for him for seven years so that he might have Rachel's hand, Jacob meets a man who, like himself, is not above deceit in order to get what he wants. Promising Rachel, Laban gives him instead the older and unattractive Leah. In fact, as Jacob had tricked Isaac with his disguise, so Laban tricks Jacob, letting Jacob think that the veiled Leah is Rachel.

The Jacob we knew back in the home of Isaac would not have let anyone get away with pulling such a switch on him. Knowing him as we do — or think we do — we expect him to vow vengeance upon Laban and set his clever mind to retaliation. But, that is where we're in for a big surprise. Instead of revenge, Jacob accepts the situation and strikes a new bargain: to work seven more years for the hand of Rachel. For all of his scheming nature, Jacob was able to accept a disappointment and was flexible enough so that he could do something positive to make the best of the situation.

Jacob, as his name implies, began life as a devious supplanter. But there was something more to him than that — as there is to each of us.

PARADISE TOBACCO SALES

PARADISE TOBACCO BARN

A Note to the Tobacco Farmer:

Do you know how auction works?! Do you know how tobacco is divided out at auction? If you don't please call Paradise Sale Barn and find out.

Why does a tobacco buyer want to buy at your farm? Because he will buy for less on the farm. Consider your low grade - what are you getting on the farm?

First sale is December 6th! Let's fill the warehouse — it's important. First sale means a lot for season pricing. New crop! Good demand! Get your check that day. Sale starts at 10:00 am. Any tobacco not unloaded by 10:00 am might be sold next sale.

A Note To The Tobacco Buyer:

All tobacco buyers are welcome at Paradise Sales Barn. If you think the warehouse doesn't give you enough tobacco on sale day, then bid stronger on low grades or outgrade and see if auctioneer doesn't give you a larger percentage. Remember, all buyers are welcome in the warehouse - we aim to please.

We will have a grader at receiving door so bottom of skid is like the top of the skid. Our warehouse personnel are there to work for you - the buyer and the seller. We are not order takers - we will represent tobacco for you.

A Note From the Warehouse:

The farmer is the number one Key in keeping tobacco barn going. If we don't get tobacco, we can not work for you - the farmer. All warehouse charges are the same.

Also, we welcome back for our 8th year - Mitch Ashby, auctioneer. We feel he is an important contributor in our warehouse.

SALES EVERY MON., WED., FRI.
beginning in December
SALES WILL START PROMPTLY AT 10:00 AM

ties, 38 percent never require coverals. Of the three-quarters who responded, footbaths are never required in 49.2 percent of the cases. Change of footwear is never required in 28.8 percent of the cases.

• On question 34, how are dead animals disposed of, 6.3 percent of the respondents still spread them on the field. "Other" methods of disposal (not including picked up by rendering truck, buried, or burned) was checked by 16.1 percent of the respondents.

• On question 35, how promptly are dead animals disposed of, "when it's convenient" was checked by 20.4 percent of the respondents, and "other" by 4.2 percent.

• On question 33, do dogs, cats, or wildlife have access to feed storage, 44.7 percent said they did; on pig facilities, 47.4 percent said they did; to pigs, 39.2 percent said they did; and carcasses, 26.7 percent said they did.

• Pseudorabies was diagnosed on the herds of 34.1 percent of the respondents in the survey.

(The survey questions and answers are included with this article.)

The results of the survey, recently released, have generated alarm and in many cases shock from the agriculture community.

"I'm alarmed . . . that we haven't done a very good job of biosecurity," said Chet Hughes, Lancaster County livestock agent. "I think with the density of livestock in this area, biosecurity needs to be on the front burner in everybody's mind. We cannot afford to take losses by disease."

The disease caused by the pseudorabies virus, PRV, first spread throughout the county in mid-April of 1980, according to Lancaster Farming records. The disease has plagued swine producers for many years, and the way it spreads between farms, according to Sischo in a column written specifically for this newspaper, "Pseudorabies Headline Update," is still a mystery. Symptoms mimic the disease called rabies, with convulsions, depression, and even blindness. In most cases, pseudorabies results in more stillbirths, which creates a huge loss of income for many breeding operations.

The survey itself, according to Sischo, will be used to help "identify management schemes that will be most helpful in stopping the spread of pseudorabies in Pennsylvania," he wrote in "Pseudorabies Headline Update."

"I'm not exactly sure, looking at the results, if there's a real blaring answer here," said Fisher, chair of the eradication program. "There's a lot of small pieces of answers that don't really tell you anything."

Fisher said that while he believes some PRV is spread by trucks, because of the density of hog farms in the county, in a stretch extending across the north central to northeast part of Lancaster County, he believes that natural air flow also contributes to the spread.

Fisher said that studies in Europe show that water droplets carried through the air were documented to carry a virus "15 to 20 miles," he said.

While there has been PRV-positive herds identified throughout other parts of the county, and other counties as well, the incidence of pseudorabies is still great mostly in the "population-dense" area of northeastern Lancaster County.

More information regarding the survey will be available to producers at a meeting scheduled on Tuesday, November 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Bergstrasse School in Ephrata. (More details about the meeting are scheduled in next week's Lancaster Farming.)

As for now, producers should take steps, after looking at the survey, to see what can be done about improving biosecurity on the farm, according to Fisher and Hughes.

"I thought that in the southeast, particularly in the two counties they focued on, Lancaster and Lebanon, that more people would be aware of biosecurity and would be doing a little better job of that, particularly since most of the industry is here and most of the disease is here," said Hughes, Lancaster livestock agent.

Hughes said that showers, if available, should always be used. He told Lancaster Farming that he was "alarmed" that so many producers don't require coveralls or footbaths.

The livestock agent said producers should require all those who enter and leave the facilities to change footwear or disinfect their boots before entering another facility. If nothing else, then footbaths should be used regardless — an inexpensive way to fight the spread of PRV.

The survey was alarming to Hughes because it showed that nearly 50 percent of the producers don't require a footbath of those entering the facilities.

"To me, poor biosecurity can lead to lower profitability," he said. "When you see that a third of the producers aren't changing footwear, it points to a need for industry awareness."

He said all producers should take a second look at their biosecurity measures and take steps now to correct them.

Hughes said the disease can affect other livestock, and the spread of it could have a major economic impact on other types of farming as well, if unchecked.

But Fisher, head of the state pork producers, said as chair of the program, a big problem is overcoming the myth that the producers are slow to do anything about stopping PRV. The National Pork Producers Council, together with the Livestock Conservation Institute and USDA, state and local affiliates, has set the year 2000 as the date for the total elimination of the disease.

"The biggest problem I've had is overcoming the thinking from Washington that Pennsylvania producers don't want to cooperation, that they don't care," he said. "I've heard this time and time again, that we're not interested in cleaning up. And I keep telling them, we are, we are, people are doing things, it's not always as vis-teria is safe for use in stimulating additional milk production in lactating cows.

Although Monsanto was not the only business to develop and research BST, it is the first to get its brand, being marketed as "POSILAC," approved for commercial use.

For several years, milk and meat derived from dairy cattle involved in research trials of injectable BST has been approved as fully safe for human consumption.

Because BST is a protein and is destroyed by digestive acids, it cannot negatively affect the health of a human if directly injested.

Even if it were to be accidentally injected into a human, it would have no effect, because it is specific for "lower" animals. By lower animals, it is meant that the chemical receptors in humans for a somatotropin are more complicated and not designed to accept BST.

Human somatotropin works in humans, but bovine somatotropin does not.

Bovine somatotropin is a messenger protein hormone which directs the cow to send nutrients to the milk-producing part of the udder and thereby stimulate additional milk production. The quality of the milk is virtually identical. There is no means currently available by which anyone can differentiate between milk produced by treated or untreated cows.

Researchers, affiliated and unaffiliated with companies developing BST for market, have said that in order to use BST properly requires excellent herd management.

It will work immediately in a cow, but feeding and nutrition must be carefully watched, similar to the care and feeding of currently high producing cows, whose production is attributed to genetic selection for high production.

An information package sent out to media by Monsanto this week included a pamphlet that obstensibly is designed to be distributed to dairymen.

The 12-page (counting both sides of each page) pamphlet presents an overview of the benefits, the use and handling of POSILAC, projected financial gains, and the selection of cows for treatment.

Specifically, the brochure states that for selection of cows, dairymen should: "Select healthy cows. Select cows that are nine weeks in milk. Practice good nutritional management."

Further it states that, "Availability of balanced feed is the most important factor in determining response to POSILAC. Cows should be fed a balanced ration based on their production level following guidelines established by the NRC. Feed should be available to cows at all times. Feed bunks should be managed to assure that feed is always fresh and of a high quality."

The financial advantage to using BST treatments can not be objectively determined because Lisa Watson, manager of health and consumer affairs for the Public Affairs Office of the Animal Sciences Division of Monsanto, said Wednesday that a price per dose has not been released.

Monsanto apparently is geared up to take orders for the drug.

In the brochure, there is printed several times a 24-hour, toll-free number for dairymen to call to order POSILAC. A delivery of POSILAC is to come to the dairyman's door within 48 hours by express mail, except for first orders, which may take longer.

However, a pre-recorded message is currently the response to the toll-free call (1-800-233-2999) to Monsanto. The message states that the FDA has approved POSILAC and that the customer service department will be available Nov. 15.

In the brochure, under instructions for its use, it states that the material should be warmed from refrigerator temperature to room temperature (59- to 86-degrees) before injecting into the tailhead, or neck area of the cow.

The doses, injected once every 14 days, are to come in prefilled syringes. Also, with each order is to be included a syringe disposal container and a warning not to reuse any of the syringes.

The brochure indicates that the syringe disposal container, once full, is to be mailed through the federal postal system to a subcontracted disposal company — at no additional cost to the dairyman.

Dairy producers cannot yet use Monsanto's product, however, for at least 90 days because of a moratorium imposed by the U.S. Congress, which reflects a similar moratorium in the European Community.

Some opposition to the use of the product is expected, but to date, the tactics of opposition groups have been to sensationlize the issue without the benefit of sound fact or science.

Some newspapers have quit reporting the "news releases" of such organizations.

There are also other groups and individuals that have claimed opposition to the use of BST because of possible competitive disadvantages to those who operate "family farms."

Dr. Robert Yonkers, PSU Extension agricultural economist based in State College, said Monday that it is too early to predict what kind of effect BST might have on the competitiveness of dairy operations.

He said that it could possibly hasten an irreversable trend toward fewer, but larger dairy operations, and further loss of the one-family farm.

That trend has been continuing since the advent of the industrial age.

This year, the USDA ceased its annual survey of family farms in the United States — not just dairy operations — because the number of farm families has dwindled to represent less than 1.8 percent of the total U.S. estimated population.

Yonkers did say that most studies which project dairy industry costs and milk prices out to five years show that the farmgate milk price will be lower with or without BST. He said that with BST, some predict that the price should be lower by 25 cents to 50 cents per hundredweight of milk.

"But then you get into all those assumptions," Yonkers said about the studies he's read. He said that his opinion is that it is too early to make any kind of supportable prognostication.

He said there are too many variables to determine BST's impact to the dairy industry.

However, Yonkers said that other studies show that the use of BST may well lower the cost of production from 50 cents to $1 per hundredweight of milk.

Monsanto and others prepping to sell BST have promoted this projection.

"We are very pleased with the FDA's thorough review and subsequent approval of POSILAC," said Walter Hobgood, vice president of Monsanto's Animal Sciences Division, in a prepared statement.

"This new product will enable all U.S. dairy farmers, regardless of the size of their operation, to improve their herds' productivity.

"Supplemental BST is the first of many agricultural biotechnology products that American farmers will be able to depend upon to help them maintain their position as dependable, efficient suppliers of the world's food," Hobgood said.

According to the statement, "Since 1982, approximately 10,000 dairy cows have received supplemental BST in Monsanto-sponsored research studies, conducted at more than 100 universities and commercial dairy farms in the U.S. and abroad."

In its statement, Monsanto said that during the 90-day moratorium on the use of BST, it "will be active in educational efforts targeted to dairy producers, veterinarians and nutritionists."

The FDA approval was also supported by the American Dietetic Association, in Chicago, Ill., by the Animal Health Institute, based in Alexandria, Va., and by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Furthermore, according to the U.S. DHH, Monsanto has agreed to conduct a post-approval monitoring program that includes a two-year, before-and-after BST followup of milk production and drug residues in the top 21 dairy states; a 12-month comparison of the proportion of milk dumped because of residues between BST herds and non-BST herds; a reporting system to monitor all BST use and follow up on complaints; and monitor mastitis, animal drug use and resultant milk losses in 24 commercial dairy herds using BST.

As far as the impact of BST on Dairy Herd Improvement Association record keeping, Phil Dukas, CEO of National DHIA, said Thursday that there has been found no way for DHIAs to track the use of BST, although it would be beneficial to the integrity of the record keeping system reflecting the genetic characteristics of a line of cattle.

However, in the National DHIA rules there is a provision that technicians are bound to report and include in a permanent record any injections they observe:

"The injection of any substance immediately prior to, or during, a milking on test day will require the application of an appropriate permanent label."

A "permanent label" means it is reported on the cow's test record.

Export Demand Fuels Increase In Poultry Production

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Strong rises in poultry export levels are fueling demand for chicken parts, and provide some good news for domestic producers, according to a USDA economist.

Dr. Milt Madison, USDA Economic Research Service (ERS), poultry analysis division, told a group of about 32 poultry industry representatives at a seminar on Monday that "one of the things that has been driving the broiler industry is the U.S. consumer liking breast meat, and a lot of the rest of the world willing to buy dark meat as long as it's at cheap prices." Exports, mostly to Mexico, will continue to increase in the coming year.

Madison was on hand to discuss the 1994 outlook for poultry producers. The information was gathered from the Economic Research Service's "Livestock and Poultry Outlook Report," which is changing from a six-times-a-year publication to monthly, and will have a format much like the monthly supplement, "Livestock and Poultry Update."

"One of the things we see with the record exports this year is a little bit of change in the pattern of the parts prices for broilers," he said. While breast prices have dropped 15 percent from August through October this year, leg quarter prices have increased 10 percent. Whole bird prices remainded constant.

In 1993, demand for broiler product jumped about 20 percent over a year ago. In 1994, USDA-ERS predicts about a 4-5 percent increase in exports, according to Madison, which makes up about 8 percent of total broiler products being produced. That will mean about 2.3 billion pounds of products being produced overall.

Net returns are up slightly from a year ago, but 1994 should see a downturn because of slightly higher feed costs. Corn prices will be about 30 cents per bushel higher, while soybean prices will experience a $12 per ton decline.

This year, according to the ag economist, broiler companies "at the wholesale whole bird level are earning about 7 cents a pound on broiler production," he said. Next year, however, the net returns will be a couple of centers per pound lower, he said, because of the increase in feed prices and an overall lower price per bird.

Dr. Milt Madison, ag economist with USDA-ERS, poultry analysis division, right, spoke about the poultry outlook for 1994 at the poultry management and health seminar on Monday. Dr. Patty Dunn, research assistant, Penn State Dept. of Veterinary Science, presented a Marek's Disease Update at the seminar.

In 1994, egg production will be put about 1 percent over the 1993 level. The 1993 net returns are about 9 cents per dozen at wholesale level. Next year will remain profitable, with a small increase in demand for egg products during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. Madison said the shift in buying from an older to a younger market means demand will show some strength.

Egg exports make up only 3 percent of the total production, but with no large impact on price. For 1994, net return should be about 5 cents per dozen, with egg prices down about 3 cents per dozen.

Turkey producers should expect demand to spark a 1 percent increase in meat production. Returns should be at the break even level, mostly because of a slight increase in feed costs.

The proposed NAFTA will have little or no effect on export demand for poultry products, according to the ag economist.

Marek's Disease Vaccine

A vaccine to control Marek's Disease (MD) is only as good as what you do with it and requires a "multifactorial," approach, including proper selection of birds for resistance to the disease and overall bird health management, according to Dr. Patty Dunn, research assistant in Penn State's Department of Veterinary Science.

Dunn described the "cancer-like" disease which leaves many birds with the characteristic "split-leg" stance and which attacts the bird's central nervous system, spreading tumors throughout the body. The disease was first identified in 1907 by Jozsef Marek, but through the years, more potent and deadly serotypes have been identified.

The disease, a herpes virus, infects the lymphocytes, or white blood cells important to the bird's immune system. Three serotypes exist — the oncogenic, which causes the severe form of the disease (tumors); non-oncogenic, which produces no tumors; and the herpes virus of turkeys, known as HVT.

MD can attack chickens at 5-6 weeks of age, but more frequently attacks them at 12-24 weeks of age. The disease is prevalent throughout the world, and when a chicken gets the disease, it is with the bird for life. The virus affects chicks within one week of hatching.

(SE).

Based on experiences with the USDA SE Pilot Project, review of SE research results, and consumer and public health expectations for a safe food supply, a committee of poultry farmers, poultry industry representatives, university faculty, and government officials developed the PEQAP.

The PEQAP is a voluntary industry program intended to minimize SE contamination of chicken eggs. Although the program cannot guarantee shell eggs to be free of SE contamination, the program does assure commitment of the producer to implement those management practices most likely to prevent SE contamination.

Thus, PEQAP participants are assuring the public that they are taking every reasonable precaution to assure the safety of shell eggs.

The program calls for:

1. Producers to purchase chicks from only U.S. Sanitation Monitored SE-negative breeder flocks.
2. Sample chick dropping papers.
3. Environmentally sample and culture samples from pullet house between 10 and 15 weeks.
4. Pullets not monitored for SE during the growing period or were SE positive will have the the laying house environmentally sampled 7 to 14 days after placement.
5. Laying houses will be environmentally sampled when birds are 29 to 31 weeks of age and again when they are 44 to 46 weeks of age.
6. Pullet or laying houses with positive samples for SE must be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected between flocks.
7. Houses with negative environmental samples will not be required to test eggs.
8. Houses with positive environmental samples will be required to test 480 eggs every 2 weeks for 4 test periods. If all the eggs test negative for the 4 test periods, then 480 eggs must be tested each month for the life of the flock.
9. If any egg test is positive, then all eggs must be diverted for pasteurization or hard cooking.
10. To resume sale of eggs as table eggs, 1,000 eggs must be tested every 2 weeks for 4 test periods and test negative. Then 480 eggs must be sampled each month for the life of the flock.
11. Molted flocks will need to be environmentally sampled 5 to 7 weeks after return to full feed.
12. An acceptable rodent control and monitoring program must be maintained at all times.
13. All participants must maintain an acceptable biosecurity program.
14. Eggs must be kept under refrigeration.

Carl A. Farm:

right against such as happened in other areas of the state, especially during the 1970s.

It's a place where every driver of every car (albeit traffic light) gets a headnod or a wave from people doing yardwork.

In the one-road village of Pitman at Snyder's (no relation) restaurant and grocery store, the community's togetherness is evident — strangers at the lunch counter in the plain, white-painted block building are recognized as such.

When the screen door closes, men sitting at the counter, sipping coffee and picking at a triangle of pie stop talking and look up.

It is just the sort of place to raise a family and dairy farm with a good herd of Holsteins.

Carl A. Snyder is the namesake of the farm. His sons, Tracy, 26, and Steve, 30, have taken over the farm and have retained the Carl A. prefix.

It's Carl A. Farm, the second generation.

For 30 years, the farm has been a good provider for the Snyder family, while under the direction of Carl. But now that he's "retired" to field work, credit and blame for herdsmanship goes to Steve and Tracy. They rent the farm from their father and have been trying to build the herd to a level that can better support all.

The dairy herd, under the sons, had increased average production last year to lead the county, and just missed the top spot this year.

In 1991, the herd was third in the county, among those herds on test with Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

In 1992, the two had switched to three-times-per day milking, which shot the herd's production to top of the county.

This past February, production peaked at an average of 28,500 pounds of milk, 900 pounds protein, and 1,000 pounds of fat.

Steve and Tracy said that they believe that production had stabilized and has now dropped because they sold a number of cows to help

The benefits of participating in this program are many. Participating producers are:

- Reducing the risk of marketing contaminated eggs.
- Helping to maintain consumer confidence in table eggs.
- Reducing liability exposure for human outbreaks of SE.
- Improving quality of eggs being marketed.
- Being responsible farmers and business people.

The PEQAP is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation. The program is being supported by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Penn State University, University of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission, Salmonella Enteritidis Pilot Project, and United States Department of Agriculture. The program is an excellent model on how farmers, industry leaders, university faculty, and government can work together to solve a major problem.

The PEQAP is an excellent program all egg producers should be participating in. By participating in the program, you are helping to insure the future of your industry.

Many exciting things are happening in the egg industry. The new American Egg Board promotion program, the combining of efforts of the Northeast states in egg promotion, and the PEQAP should help improve consumer use of eggs.

As one industry leader said recently, "It is good to be in an organization that spends more time increasing demand for eggs than trying to cut back chicken numbers."

By supporting these programs, we should be increasing the demand for eggs, which means everyone benefits.

For more information on the PEQAP, contact the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation Office, 300 North Progress Avenue, Harrisburg PA 17109, (717) 652-7530.

Center Builds New Pesticide Facility

NEWARK, Del. — Under construction to be completed by mid-August is a new pesticide containment and storage building at the University of Delaware Research and Education Center in Georgetown.

The building, which represents state-of-the-art construction for such a facility, includes pesticide storage areas, a mixing area, locker room and a rinse pad for equipment used to apply pesticides.

Mark Isaacs, director of the center, explains that "new experimental compounds and environmental regulations required an up-to-date facility for handling agricultural pesticides," he said. "This facility will also allow our researchers and specialists to use compounds that are approved for experimental use only. EPA guidelines for restrictions and regulations must be followed carefully."

Isaacs said the containment area of the facility has received special attention. With the new structure, any leaks or spills will be contained in the room by a small curb around the perimeter. Cleanup will then be confined to a small area.

The three storage areas will be used for herbicides, insecticides and experimental herbicides. By separating the different compounds, scientists will have reduced exposure overall to chemicals. For example, an entomologist working with insecticides would work only in the insecticide-containment room and could avoid possible exposure to herbicides. Curbs were also installed in these rooms for secondary containment.

The mixing room and rinse pad have curbs as well as self-contained drainage systems to handle spills and leaks without contaminating the underlying ground or septic system. Rinse water runs through a pesticide detoxification treatment that absorbs the chemicals in replaceable activated carbon filters. This facility is also carefully ventilated to enhance occupational safety.

The rinse pad and treatment area is 36 by 20 feet, allowing trucks and other machinery to enter for cleaning. Spray equipment can also be filled and rinsed here.

The final design was drafted by Chuck Dobbs of the university's facilities planning and construction from preliminary designs by Dr. Jim Scarborough, extension engineer. Substantial financial support for the building was allocated by the State of Delaware Bond Bill in 1992 and 1993.

Fun Night Offers Entertainment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's Farm Show is just around the corner and residents can enter several "Dairy Fun Night" contests to win cash prizes. The "Ice Cream Churn-Off" and "Dairy Obstacle Contest" are activities at the annual "Fun Night," held Tuesday, Jan. 11, at the PA Farm Show Complex.

The "Churn-Off" requires contestants to create their own flavors of homemade ice cream. The winner of this contest will take home a top prize of $300. Second and third place recipes will receive $150 and $125, respectively. Previous contests have featured simple recipes, like Raspberry, and more creative ice creams, such as "Hawaiian Delight."

Eight qualified entries will compete in the "Churn-Off" contest. All entries must use Real dairy products. Only original, unpublished recipes will compete in the contest. Judges will use the following criteria to select the winner: effective use of dairy products (30%); taste and visual appeal (30%); recipe originality and creativity (30%); and ease of preparation (10%).

For a second year, "Dairy Fun Night" will include a "Dairy Obstacle Contest." This contest allows competitors to experience activities that typically occur on a dairy farm. Teams must consist of three people. Each team member will participate in a different activity - stacking hay/straw bales; dodging "cowpies;" or pouring milk from a large milk can into small bottles.

Three age categories are available for the "Obstacle Contest." The categories include: 12 years and under; 13 to 19 years; and adults (19 years and above). Two awards will be made in each category; first, $75 and second, $50. The first four entries in each category will be selected to compete in the contest.

These contests are open to all Pennsylvania residents, except those that have an affiliation with the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. Persons with professional-status cannot enter the "Churn-Off" contest. The "Churn-Off" contest is limited to one entry per family, FFA chapter, 4-H club, or other organization. The same rule applies per category for the "Obstacle Contest."

Entries for both contests must be received in the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program office by December 17, 1993. Entries must include the names of all contest participants and be mailed to: "Dairy Fun Night Ice Cream Churn-Off" or Dairy Fun Night Obstacle Contest."

The virus is shed in the feather follicle epithelium and through oral and respiratory secretions, according to Dunn. Morbidity and mortality depend on the form of clinical disease.

Symptoms include the classic split leg stance, and the nerve cells are affected (impulses cannot be conducted). In more severe cases, tumors develop on the spleen, liver, and many other vital organs.

Veterinarians treat the disease through a vaccine that provides resistance to disease after infection. Infection with a mild strain of the virus provides immunity against the effects of later infection with the pathogenic virus.

Selection of the vaccine is important, as is procedure, in preventing loss because of MD. Veterinarians select the most avirulent strain to provide adequate protection, according to Dunn. Those administering the vaccine should pay strict attention to handling, mixing, application, and monitoring.

"The vaccine is only as good as what you do with it after you get it," she said. "Treat it with a lot of respect."

Dunn traced the progression of vaccine types, and said a new type, CVI988/Rispin, used successfully in Europe, should be available to veterinarians in this country in a few years.

Producers should remember that immunity is not the sole solution to MD control, however, and that overall bird health management and selection of genetics resistant to the virus are important.

She said that producers, particularly in the Delmarva region, are seeing the incidence of Marek's Disease increasing and are taking steps to control it. She said there is "evidence of problem farms out there that need to get ahead of Marek's Disease before it gets ahead of them."

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Members and guests of the Mifflin County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) met recently for their annual Joint Ag Banquet held at the Belleville Community Hall.

Highlights for the evening included awards and speaker Dr. Gary Alt. research biologist for the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

One of the highest awards given by Washington, the ASCS Administrators Award, went to D'Ann L. Smith for her work on the Disaster Reserve Team. Smith was recommended for and accepted the challenge to go to Washington to help with the 1991 Disaster Assistance Program, a program connected with crop disasters due to the 1991 weather. Smith has been a program assistant in Mifflin County's ASCS office for six years.

Stanley McKeen, Fred Myers, and Earl Vaughn accepted Certificate of County Service awards for 10 years of ASCS service as community committeemen.

Mifflin County ASCS Executive Director Donna Snook received a certificate for 30 years of service.

Commissioner Murry Laite presented the Soil Conservation Service's Cooperator of the Year Award to an owner/tenant team for their conservation practices. Owners Howard and Betty Bonson accepted the award along with farm operators Lee D. and JoAnn Yoder who manage the 70 acre farm close to the Juniata River.

James Laughlin and son Joe Laughlin received the Goodyear Award, given to the previous year's Cooperator of the Year Award recipient.

ASCS member Don Baker presented a $25 check to the local FFA Chapter. John L. King presented the same amount to both the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. The money is to be used for conservation-oriented programing.

After the awards program, Master of Ceremonies Kenneth Loht introduced Dr. Gary Alt, Research Biologist for the Pennsylvania Game Commission. Alt's entertaining slide show and narrative revealed some interesting black bear facts and habits — man of which kept the audience smiling through the whole program.

- Black bear milk fat content is 24 percent compared to 4 percent for cow's milk.
- Black bears relocated within 100 miles will go straight home again.
- Pennsylvania black bears are the largest in the world. Overall, adult males average 205 pounds compared to an average 486 pounds in Pennsylvania. The abundance of food is the reason.
- For this same reason, black bear newborns double their weight in two weeks and triple it again in four weeks. Black bear cubs weigh an average of 12.8 ounces at birth making black bears, in relation to all mammals, the smallest in proportion to their mothers.
- Female black bears cover an average range of 3 to 5 miles compared to 10 to 15 miles for males.
- Alt said if confronted by a black bear it's useless to climb a tree (bears love to climb a tree any size), forget about entering water (bears love water), and don't even think about outrunning black bears (they can run more than 30 miles per hour). The key to escaping a bear attack, Alt says, is to take a friend along who runs slower than you!
- Seriously, Alt said, never stare directly at a bear. Alt said bears give warning signs before charging. Their ears fold back, their lips roll up, they clash their jaws, then they lunge forward and slam the ground with their paws. After this, they will charge. Alt said he has been the target of numerous bear charges — each bear broke off its charge between 3 to 10 feet.

pay for an expansion of their freestall facility, and because they have added first lactation heifers.

Those first lactation heifers make up 40 percent of the current, 84-cow milking herd.

This August and September, in an attempt to raise the average, they tried going back to three-times-per day milking, but decided that the extra work wasn't worth the increase in milk production.

But they appear to have good reason for being optimistic about the herd's chances for getting back to the top.

They have a couple of good cow lines to follow up — two of the top 10 1993 Pa.DHIA-tested Holsteins are from the Snyders' herd.

At third place statewide is Pepper, a 6-year-old which recorded a 305-day, 1993 lactation of 40,502 pounds of milk, 3.1 percent, or 1,236 pounds of fat, and 3.2 percent, or 1,278 pounds of protein.

Pepper is a homebred cow whose dam had made a top production of 32,000 pounds of milk, with 1,000 pounds of fat and 900 pounds of protein.

Steve said that Pepper's sire is Macabob Cane Dutchman Cinnamon, no longer in the lineup of a Midwestern artificial insemination company, and which was used for cleanup work, because Pepper wouldn't settle with the higher priced semen.

Despite her production record, Steve and Tracy said they aren't looking use Pepper as the foundation of the herd, but they aren't about to count out her benefit to the operation.

She's freshened four times and has had four bull calves, all of which were sold for beef.

Pepper is a well-statured, strong milking cow that has held up well, Steve said. She classified 84 points, Good Plus, and, while bull studs aren't interested in her pedigree, there has been some interest in her sons from local dairymen who use natural insemination market. Especially with her production record.

The cow to which the brothers are looking to build up the herd is dead. Her name was Poppy.

Steve said that Poppy, ranked 10th in the state in production, unfortunately died shortly after calving stillborn twins. Her earlier offspring hold lots of promise, Steve said.

Before she died, she bore three heifers, two from average bulls apparently are headed on the same production direction as Poppy. Her first calf made 32,000 pounds of milk as a 3-year-old; the other posted a production record of 23,000 pounds on a first lactation.

Her last heifer is a Rocky daughter and Steve said there is some interest.

But there is a twist to following the pedigree. Poppy is also a homegrown cow, the daughter of a homegrown bull which was purchased by Oakenbound Farms in Richland (listed under Berks County by the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association, but the owners, Richard and Nelson Troutman, are members of the Lebanon Holstein Club.)

According to Steve, Poppy's sire is Carl A. Oakenbound Fred. The bull came from a good cow at Carl A. Farm and was sold to the Troutmans and later the bull got a good proof through an AI operation and was used as a sire by the Snyders.

"That's a pretty strong family," Steve said, "and the Poppy cow had some index. That's why we hope this Rocky heifer does good for us, because there was some interest in the Poppy family."

The couple hundred acre farm has an interesting, if not unorthadox, history upon which Steve and Tracy are building.

The history of the farm goes back to the Snyder's maternal grandfather, Frank Kehler, from whom Carl and Alice (Kehler) Snyder bought the farm in 1960.

Kehler had started the farm with chickens, pigs and a few dairy cattle.

The dairy cattle had mainly come through unintentional purchases — Art Morgan, a local cattle hauler who would pick up culls and take them to auction, used to stop by the Kehler farm and show him cattle that Morgan thought were too good to go to slaughter.

According to the Snyders, the cattle would have a case of mastitis, or a stepped on teat, or some problem that Kehler would be able to fix. He would decide if the rehabilitative effort would be worth the price, albeit much reduced from the cost of a sound cow.

And many of those salvaged bossies ended up milking well, even if a quarter shy on the udder.

When Carl and Alice took over from her father, they changed the operation to an all dairy farm, except for some horses, and farmed for 30 years before their sons took over.

Carl still directs and does most of the fieldwork and Alice likes to cut hay; insists on it, according to her sons.

"She likes the self-propelled haybine," Steve said. "She's mowed hay since 1960s. She's probably mowed 90 percent of the hay raised on the farm and she'll continue to do it until she can't," he said. "She's given up milking though."

The transition to Steve and Tracy taking over the farm wasn't immediate.

At first, all four of Snyder's sons worked together. Steve graduated from Cornell University in 1985 and, after working for Pennfield Feeds, came back to the farm in 1988. That was an impetus for the sons to take over.

Mark, 27, is now an accountant, and Donald, 31, sells feed. But when it became apparent that the farm was not really big enough to support all four and families, and because of interests other than full-time dairying, Steve and Tracy formed a partnership.

Penn-Jersey Products Inc. gave a July tour of Pennsylvania farms to Canadian farmers and the Carl A. Farm was one of the stops.

It's no accident that Steve and Tracy's operation was chosen. They are continuing the family tradition of seeking to build and maintain a sensible, safe, and profitable farming operation.

In addition to leading county average production from late last year into this spring, the farm's herd been at or near the top of the county list several times: in 1969 it was top; second in 1972 and 1979; and fourth in 1991.

But the brothers said they didn't expect the distinction of leading the county to last, because, though dairy farming may sometimes seem routine and monotonous, things really do change.

Farms have been, especially within the past 30 years, one of the most ever-changing, dynamic businesses to be operating.

The average milk production of the Holstein herd at Carl A. Farm in Schuylkill County jumped to the top of the county because of changes in milking, feeding and nutrition implemented by Steve and Tracy Snyder, brothers in partnership. At first a single family farm, it was expanded last year in order to support the families of the brothers' families. The Thoroughbred horses in the foreground belong to the farm, but are not a major business concern.

Steve Snyder waters calves, hopefuls for the future herd.

Not only is there increased competition in milk production as other farms up-size their herds and modernize in an attempt to give the next generation a shot at staying in dairying, but real estate speculators and increasing societal costs effectively pressure all farmers to seek means of increasing cash flow.

Over the years, the goal of the Car A. Farm has been to achieve a smoothly running, and family oriented operation.

In the transfer between generations, while that goal has not changed, the methods of achieving it have.

Steven and Tracy added a TMR mixer, use a nutritionist, expanded the barn, and have conducted other experiments based on research to see what works for them and what doesn't.

Some of the "experiments," such as 3X milking, have been pretty well put on the back, back burner.

The two were maintaining a 6 a.m., 2 p.m. and 10 p.m. milking schedule.

"I was getting as much sleep," Steve said, "but we couldn't leave the farm."

Even before that, there was change at the farm. In 1991, a cousin was getting married and no one wanted to stay at the farm. In order to allow everyone to enjoy the family occassion, the sons switched to a noon and midnight milking schedule.

Now, after selling cattle and trying to concentrate on getting the herd back to strength and to continue to merchandise, the two are back to twice a day milking and rotating every other weekend off.

The future for Steve and Tracy looks good, they said.

The soil type isn't the best, but they usually get a good hay crop and corn.

The area isn't getting the overwhelming pressure from residential and commercial development as compared to other areas of the state, although it is picking up — three homes went in over the summer on a farm property immediately to the north that was subdivided by a speculator.

The brothers have made an attempt to buy a parcel that adjoins their property, but raw residential property is being sold to commuters, who benefit from cheap fuel, at prices twice than can be justified by farming.

And although commissioned real estate agents are quick to pitch a community's "rural aspects and quiet living" in pushing a sale, the Snyders never heard of an agent who would suggest selling a property at a lower price to a farmer to maintain those rural aspects and quiet living.

As president of the Schuylkill County DHIA board of directors for the past six years, "I've seen a lot of big changes in that time.

"Lancaster (County DHIA) forced a lot of changes when they changed to a different processing center," he said. The Lancastrians had forced to the front the issue of mandatory state association allegiance, when another state's association could offer a wider assortment of services.

Within the past three years, in response to a number of Lancaster County dairymen abandoning the Pa.DHIA and going to Raliegh for service with the support of National DHIA, the Pa.DHIA has upgraded its services in order to compete, and, according to Steve, has allowed its members a better chance at competition.

The even bigger change was centralization, which more or less precipitated the whole Lancaster County issue.

"Centralization has gone through," Steve said, "and for the most part, it has been smooth, except for Lancaster. It all worked out in the end and I think it's better than it was before. There's less red tape to run through to make a change in service."

Furthermore, the county DHIA has only lost one herd over the past year and he said it was recently reported to him at a Pa.DHIA regional meeting that the state membership is still strong.

Boyer Named

ran a small milk route through the town, raised Shetland ponies, and dealt in horses. Ira and the former Cass Anthony, a neighbor, were married in 1941. They dairied for a few years on a farm near their homes, then operated a rented farm near Hanover for a decade.

In 1956, the couple moved their two dozen-head dairy herd to a farm they had purchased near Thomasville, today the home of Sunnybend Holsteins. Through the years, Boyer was active in leadership roles with the county Holstein club, Dairy Herd Improvement Association, and the York County Farmers' Association.

The Boyer's herd was consistently near the top of DHIA production lists over the years and one of the first in York County to break the 600-pound butterfat barrier. Their first herd-test year, beginning in 1947, average 7,888 pounds of milk and 309 pounds of butterfat on 23 head.

By 1975, when the Boyers dispersed their 44-head herd, that average was 16,390 pounds milk and 604 pounds of butterfat, with the fat average having passed the 600-pound level a decade before. Their sale average was the third high in Pennsylvania that year.

Animals from the Boyer's breeding were a significant part of the foundation stock for two of York County's top milk-production herds today, operated by their children. Daughter Gerry, her husband Lynn Wolf, and their three children maintain their dairy farm just east of Abbottstown. Son Tom, his wife June, and their two daughters continue the family dairying tradition on the Boyer home farm.

Following his retirement from milking cows, Ira Boyer became a sales representative for American Breeders Service, a second career he and Cassie continue today as a team. They handle semen sales and tank servicing for more than 80 farms in northern York and Adams counties.

Holstein breeders marked the annual meeting with a $500 contribution to the York County 4-H Center Exhibition Area fund-raising drive. The expansion program, now in its first phase, will add a show and sale ring, expanded parking, outdoor arena, gardening, archery, fitness trail and playground facilities to the existing 4-H Center near the town of Bair. The fund-raising to date has generated more than $53,000 toward the $200,000 project goal.

Junior Holstein milk, fat, and protein awards were presented to winners at the county level. County winner records have been forwarded for competition in the state Junior Holstein production awards recognition program in February 1994.

In the 2-year-old category, awards were split between three contenders. Winning 305-day milk record went to Dar-Dale Leader Drissle-Red, owned by Shannon Doll, Glen Rock, with a production of 23,198 pounds. # Eastern Milk Elects Gardner

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lewis Gardner, a dairy farmer from Galeton, has been re-elected president of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative.

This is his fifth one-year term as board president of a dairy co-op that has grown from 2,900 direct and affiliate member farms to 3,200 during his tenure.

Other officers elected by the board are all new to their positions. The realignment follows the retirement from the board of two key officers — former Vice President Timothy Bryant of Pawlet, Vt., and former Treasurer George Mesick of South Schodack, N.Y.

The new officers are Vice President Ed Schoen of Phelps, N.Y.; Secretary Harold Bailey of Roaring Spring; Treasurer Warren Herklotz of Franklin, N.Y.; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer Erwin Clark of Vergennes, VT.

These officers also comprise the board's Executive Committee.

Gardner is an active leader in the Council of Northeast Farmer Cooperatives, a consortium of four dairy co-ops, and in National Milk Producers Federation, a trade organization for most of the nation's dairy cooperatives.

He and his wife, Lois, operate a 100-cow dairy farm with two of their three sons. As president, Gardner represents some 3,500 farm families; as a member of the board of directors, he represents some 200 farmers in a district straddling the western portions of Pennsylvania and New York.

Schoen is a partner in an operation that milks 85 Holstein cows on a 400-acre farm. He and his wife, Jean, are also active in another business, Schoen-Wyffels Homes Inc., which markets log homes. Although this is his first term as vice president, Schoen has been an officer, serving as secretary for the past three years. As a board member, he represents about 200 farmers in Central New York, the Finger Lakes region and part of the Southern Tier.

Elected to leadership of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative are, from left, Lewis Gardner, president; Ed Schoen, vice president; Warren Herklotz, treasurer; Harold Bailey, secretary; and Erwin Clark, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Secretary Bailey has served as assistant secretary-treasurer for the past three years. He represents some 200 farmers in west central Pennsylvania including the area around State College. An Eastern member since 1966, Bailey operates a 138-acre farm with his brother, Bernard, milking 90 cows out of a herd of 180 Holsteins. Bailey and his wife, Linda, have three sons and a daughter.

As treasurer, Herklotz begins his first term as an officer of the co-op. He has been a member of the board since 1989, representing over 260 farm families in a district stretching from the Hudson River valley to parts of the Southern Tier and Central New York. Herklotz went into partnership with his brother, Herman Jr., in 1974, the same year he married his wife, Deborah. Their 230-acre farm has 60 milking cows.

Assistant Secretary-Treasurer Clark works a 350-acre farm that has been in his family for over 100 years. He and his wife Janet have three sons and a daughter. They milk 65 cows. A member of Eastern's board since 1987, Clark represents some 200 farmers on both the Vermont and New York sides of Lake Champlain.

Headquartered in Syracuse, NY, Eastern Milk has member-owners in nine Northeast states, with the majority concentrated in Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont.

Top 30 CPI Herds Listed

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The top 30 herds in the Guernsey breed have been named for Cow Performance Index (CPI).

The herd averages on this list improved from January to July. In January, the high herd average CPI was +175 and the herd ranked number 30 had a CPI average of +130. In July, the top ranked herd improved to +181 and herd number 30 had a CPI average of +130.

Another tie in fourth place were the herds owned by Alan and Barbara Mann, Silverton, Oregon, and Gerald Borgwardt, Manitowoc, Wisconsin, with CPIs of +172.

CPI is an estimation of a cow's ability to transit various traits to her offspring based on a 5:1:1 ratio of Predicted Transmitting Abilities (PTA) for pounds of protein, pounds of butterfat and type.

This list compiled by the American Guernsey Association is made up of the top 30 herds that are enrolled in the Total Performance Evaluation (TPE) program and DHIR for average CPI.

In the case of a tie, the milk, fat and protein dollar value is used.

Wetlands, Logging Workshop

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Timber harvesters and others involved in woodlot or forest management are encouraged to attend a wetlands and logging workshop to be held in mid-November.

The workshop will be held on Thursday, November 18, at Oil Creek State Park in Venango County, and again on Friday, November 19, at the Bureau of Forestry District Office in Emporium, Cameron County.

Instructors will be Dr. Robert Brooks, associate professor of wildlife, and Yuriy Bihun, project forester, both in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Topics covered will be wetland identification rules, regulations affecting timber harvesting in and around wetlands, and best management practices (BMPs) for timber harvesting operations in wetlands.

The workshop is part of the comprehensive logger certification program sponsored by the Timber Harvesting Council of Pennsylvania. Those completing the workshop will receive 1.6 logger training units (LTUs) that count toward logger certification.

"Our objective is to increase the logging community's knowledge and understanding of environmental issues that affect forestry operations," said Bihun. "We want to improve the lines of communication with natural resource professionals and bolster the professional image of timber harvesting."

The School of Forest Resources in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences designed the workshop, in cooperation with wildlife biologists, the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, foresters, and professional timber harvesters.

The workshops are sponsored by the Pennsylvania Timber Harvesting Council in cooperation with the School of Forest Resources, The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources Bureau of Forestry, the U.S. Department of Agriculture Extension Service, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Pennsylvania Association fo Conservation Districts.

Registration costs $10 per person for each workshop. For more information or to register, contact the Timber Harvesting Council, c/o Richard Wallace, 11577 Pentz Drive, North East, PA 16428, (814) 725-8897.

Engineering In Ag Equipment Shown

SPARKS, Md—At a press conference field day Wednesday the FMC Furadan 4F Custom Delivery System for soil insecticides was demonstrated at Cold Bottom Farms. The new application system to control major insect pests in corn and sorghum has been recognized as one of the top 50 engineering developments for 1993.

The new application equipment is mounted on the planter. Since granular Furadan has been replaced by the liquid form, the new equipment features a closed system that uses 15-gallon reusable containers with clean-lock connections. A computer control is mounted in the tractor cab. Data such as size of planter, rate of desired application, and ground speed are punched into the computer to control the flow into the furrow on top of the seed of each row.

"With this Custom Delivery System, we have moved into the future with use of insecticide at planting time," said Robert West, sales representative, FMC Corporation. "Granular Furadan is gone from the market, and flowable Furadan has replaced it with excellent results."

The application control is extremely accurate with the new system. In addition, the farmer has no storage or disposal problems with the containers.

The unit holds enough material on-board to treat 120 acres. And only one-tenth the number of containers or bags are needed to be handled. In a physical demonstration, the old methods to load and calibrate were shown to be considerably longer than with the new liquid loading requirements.

The pump and motor system mixes the material with water in equal parts, and the same unit can be used on any size planter.

Others participating in the field day included Binkley and Hurst, Kinze Manufacturing, Scienco, and the Baltimore extension service.

Developer Preserves Farm, Others Honored At Trust Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — For the first time in memory, a developer preserved a farm in Lancaster County.

Speaking at the Lancaster Farmland Trust annual dinner meeting at the Country Table here last week, Alan R. Musselman, executive director of the trust, said be believed this was the first time a developer in the county has preserved a farm. The recipient of the Land Benefactor Award was Paul and Linda Kay Weber for preserving their farm in West Hempfield Township.

At a banquet to honor those who support the trust with nearly 300 in attendance, Musselman reviewed the year and introduced a new video which spotlights the work to preserve "our essential character and our traditional way of life," he said.

"Today, 190 farms have been preserved in Lancaster County," said Musselman. He told those attending how remarkable this was, "over less than a 10-year period."

The trust director said that the area in western Lancaster County, the valley extending from Marietta and Maytown through Mount Joy and Elizabethtown, "is becoming one of the most protected localities in the eastern United States.

"We will be the most permanent agricultural community in the United States within several years, at the pace at which we're moving now."

Musselman spoke of the many ways in which the Trust has made a difference in helping townships to adopt programs that help to orchestrate more agricultural preservation.

Now, 37 of 41 townships in the county have ag preservation programs in place, according to the director. At the meeting, he showed the map which details preservation throughout all areas of the county. He said that by the end of the year, the Trust hopes to have copies of the map printed and available for purchase at a small fee.

Also, the Trust has been active in "defending the countryside," said Musselman, against variuous proposals to put in quarries and a hazardous waste facility. Also, Musselman spoke about the "conflict" ongoing over the proposed retirement community in Earl Township. "It has not completely subsided," he said. "But indeed we are breaking bread, here tonight, together."

Musselman told the group that the work of those involved in the growth management plan adopted by Lancaster County should be applauded. "A lot of work has gone into establishing what is now being defined and adopted as an 'urban growth boundary,'" he said, to ensure future protection of the countryside and to accommodate development where it should be occuring.

He invited those present to attend the Stewardship Forum scheduled November 15-16 at Willow Valley, which will "further the concept of urban management planning."

Part of the Trust's work, according to the director, is to "accomplish development in a way that is planned and serviceable and in a way that will not conflict with the essential values of a productive countryside," he said.

"Today, Lancaster Farmland Trust, independently, has preserved 37 farms," said Musselman. Five other farms are in negotation for protection with the county preservation board.

On a recent meeting of land trusts in Maryland, Musselman told those who attended, "People care very deeply about the countryside," he said. "Our land ethic is of long-standing and is well-developed."

At the meeting, the Trust presented Land Benefactor Awards to farmers who preserved their farms in 1993. They include an anonymous farm in Earl Township; Frank and Dawn Ludwig, Earl Township; Eugene and Ada Mae Martin, Earl Township; Paul and Linda Kay Weber, West Hempfield Township; Willis Futer, Leacock Township; Parke and Mary Breckbill, West Lampeter Township; Janet K. Eshelman and Paulyne Long, E. Drumore Township; H. Eugene and Karen Garber, W. Donegal Township; and Matthew Schnader, Brecknock Township.

At the banquet last week, the Lancaster Farmland Trust presented Land Benefactor Awards to farmers who preserved their farms in 1993. They include, from left, Linda and Paul A. Weber, Gene and Karen Garber, Matthew Schnader, and Frank Ludwig.

The Trust also presented a Board Service Award to Darvin Boyd, president of the organization, for his work in fashioning a compromise location for the controversial Garden Spot Retirement Village in Earl Township. Board members Jerry Greiner and Zoa Kile received awards for producing the Trust's first video.

New board members elected at the meeting were William J. Moshos, Jean Mowery, C. Martin Greenleaf, Jr., and Stephen Kraybill.

Also, a silent auction helped raise money for the trust. A Lone Star quilt was purchased by Greenleaf Enterprises for $511, and Dresden Plate quilt went for $397

Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity Needs Support

FREDERICK, Md. — The first Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity is to be held Sept. 4, 1994 in conjunction with the Brown Swiss Show of the Maryland State Fair, in Timonium, Md., but breeders in the region are being asked to make a concerted effort to support the program in order to ensure its success.

The show is open to all Brown Swiss breeders in Maryland and surrounding states. However, the show needs a boost at this point, according to a news release from the Maryland Brown Swiss Breeders Association.

According to Cindy Warner, of Frederick, Md., the regular rules of a futurity are being bent slightly to allow breeders more time to learn of the program and to support it.

"In order to jump-start the futurity of the 1994 Maryland State Fair, a combined first and second payment totalling $8 is still being accepted.

"To help make this a success, we need breeders to nominate all females born Sept. 1, 1991, through August 31, 1992. Then the third payment of $8 is due on or before July 1, 1994."

The Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity will be designated and numbered consecutively with 1994 as No. 1, Warner stated in the news release.

The estimated value of the first year event is $2,000.

The futurity is based on a nomination of an animal by its owner. Three payments are required for each animal that competes in the futurity — the initial nomination as a calf; a renomination as a yearling, and the final nomination as a 2-year-old. Respective payments are $3, $5, and $8.

"The quality and number of Swiss being shown locally, statewide, and nationally indicate that Brown Swiss are on the move in the dairy business," Warner said. "The Mid-Atlantic Futurity is just another way to promote the 'Big Brown Cow,' so breeders should check heifer pens and plan to be part of the greatest group of 2-year-old Brown Swiss at the 1994 Maryland State Fair."

The first payment for the 1995 futurity, for calves born between Sept. 1, 1992 and August 31, 1993, is $3, due Nov. 30, 1993; the second payment is $5, due Nov. 1, 1994; and the third payment is $8, due July 1, 1995.

Mail entries to Cindy Warner, 7417 Round Hill Road, Frederick, MD 21702. For more information, call Warner at (301) 371-5206.

Ayrshire Breeders Get Experienced Office Manager

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The Board of Directors of the Ayrshire Breeders' Association is pleased to announce that Martha Clark, former administrative assistant to the CEO of the Holstein Association of America, has assumed the position of office manager for the Ayrshire Association in Brattleboro, Vermont.

She replaces Lori Daniels who resigned to accept another position.

Mrs. Clark was employed 17 years with the Holstein Association and coordinated the workflow of the CEO's office for nearly 13 years. Art Gaddis, Ayrshire president, expressed the board's excitement over having someone with Martha's background in livestock association work and knowledge of the registered livestock industry.

Concurrently, the board contracted with Zane Akins and Associates to provide oversight management and to assist the board with policy development.

While Clark is to coordinate the day to day business, Zane Akins is to focus on organizational relationships and planning on a part-time basis.

The Ayrshire Association office is located in Brattleboro, Vermont, and shares facilities and processing services with the Holstein Association of America. It maintains a separate publication and is independently controlled by its members and board of directors.

Inquiries may be sent to Mrs. Martha Clark, Office Manager, P.O. Box 1608, Brattleboro, VT 05302-1608 or telephone 802-254-7460.

Cow Family Sets Record

BELOIT, Wis. — Brown Swiss breeders from all over the world recently joined together at the annual World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

It is there that history repeated itself during the Central National Brown Swiss Show, held in conjunction with the Expo.

The first place winner in the 4-year-old class, Kruse's GK Jade Fantasy Vix ET was named grand champion of the Brown Swiss Show. She also went on to be named reserve supreme champion of the World Dairy Expo, competing against all six breed champions.

Vix ET's dam, Kruse's Beautician Vixie, also won grand champion at the Centennial Swiss Show held in 1980. Vixie repeated the honor in 1981 and won her class for five consecutive years at the World Dairy Expo.

Vixie and Vix ET are the first mother-daughter team of any breed to both be named grand champion in the World Dairy Expo's 27-year history.

Larry Kruse, Earlville, Iowa, is the breeder and owner of the two cows. "The Great Vixie Cow", as Vixie has been named by breeders all over the world, is still alive and approaching 16 years of age. She has produced more than 200 viable embryos since 1984, and produced three more transferrable embryos in the last few weeks.

Vix ET, this year's grand champion, has 10 Excellent sisters and through embryo transfer, already has six daughters of her own. Through embryo transfer technology, the Kruse family plans to continue expanding their herd with this powerful mother-daughter duo.

Reserve grand champion of the Central National Brown Swiss Show went to Top Acres EJ Whizzbang, a 3-year-old cow owned by Wayne Sliker, St. Paris, Ohio.

Judging the Brown Swiss show was Steve Tuman, a Brown Swiss breeder from Watkins, Minn.

During the Brown Swiss show, a well-deserved honor was presented to Palmer Hoffman, of Mingo, Ohio. Hoffman is a Brown Swiss breeder who has been associated with the show herd for Top Acres Farm, St. Paris, Ohio for more than 30 years.

Hoffman was chosen as the third winner of the Klussendorf-Mackenzie Award, presented to a person who exemplifies all the basic principles of a potential Klussendorf recipient as to character, sportsmanship, ability and endeavor.

In other World Dairy Expo happenings, the Brown Swiss Premier Showcase Sale was again a very successful event. The sale, managed by Brown Swiss Enterprises, was outstanding in both production and type, with 28 lots averaging $3,211.00.

The top selling animal, (also high selling open heifer), going for $6,000 was Sun-Made Simon Tiara.

Tiara is sired by Top Acres Elegant Simon and is a daughter of Mort Matt Tammy, a "2E Certified" cow with lifetime totals of 105,650m and 4,879f.

Tiara's new owner is Rex Mort, Pierceton, Indiana. She was consigned by Sunshine Genetics, Whitewater, Wisconsin.

Make it Milk SM

HE'S REPLACING SOYBEAN MEAL AND CORN TO IMPROVE HIS PROFIT . . . SHOULD YOU?

This dairyman just took a delivery of brewers wet grain from the Miracle Feeds division of Furst-McNess. When he put a sharp pencil to it, he found that each ton of Miracle brewers wet grains could replace 230 pounds of 48 percent soybean meal (@ $250/ton) and 195 pounds of shelled corn (@ $90/ton) making brewers wet grain worth over $35.00/ton in his ration. With the average price of brewers wet grains running at approximately $25.00-$27.00/ton (depending on distance from the brewery) this dairyman has realized that brewers wet grains is an excellent buy versus soybean meal and shelled corn.

And, the dairyman found Miracle brewers wet grain also enhanced his cows' production since it is an excellent source of bypass protein and helps make up for some poor quality forage he is forced to feed this year. It also improved the palatability of his total ration. Brewers wet grains also contains 9% fat making it an excellent source for this important nutrient.

Say you're already feeding brewers grains? Maybe you should consider switching to Miracle, where you can get free computerized ration balancing plus forage testing to get the most out of your feeding program. Just call toll-free 800-888-0230.

PENNSYLVANIA CATTLEMEN'S ASSOCIATION

PCA

RD 1, Box 83, Port Matilda, PA 16870

The information in this column is presented by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association for those who have an interest in the cattle industry.

Cattlemen's Issues/Developments

When it rains, it pours — and after a period of good to excellent cattle prices, the good times have ended — temporarily. In addition to declining prices, there are other developments that affect the cattle business. When we are feeding cattle, sorting calves, or tending to other details of our business — we many times forget that there are state, national, and even international developments that also affect our business — and our profitability. Some of these recent developments are summarized below.

NAFTA — stands for the North American Free Trade Agreement, which is supported essentially by all of agriculture. The vote is scheduled for November 17. Although there are many reasons for Congress to pass this legislation and the NAFTA Agreement, one of the biggest positives is the continued expansion of beef, veal, variety meat, tallow, hides, and live cattle exports. US exports of beef and variety meats to Mexico amounted to approximately $260 million in 1992, growing about $50 million per year since 1989. It has been calculated that U.S. exports of beef cattle has added about $3 per pound to finished cattle and only slightly less to feeder cattle prices. Beef exports are almost $970 million more than beef imports, giving us a positive trade balance for our commodity. Like most other countries, Mexico has 10 to 25% tariffs on imported agricultural goods and has the legal right to raise them to 50%. There are safeguards as far as unnecessary environmental restrictions, animal health risks, etc. that are included in the intent of the NAFTA legislation. We hope that if it is not too late, you will contact your legislators encouraging them to vote for the NAFTA. Right now it does not appear that NAFTA will pass since the anti-NAFTA forces have been very active.

Reduction in USDA's market promotion program — even though agricultural exports have gradually increased and there is an increasingly large positive trade balance in all of agriculture, these funds were reduced in this year's budget. Federal dollars earmarked for market promotion is matched by private industry — including beef and pork check-off dollars. Although the amount of funds committed to export promotion from private agricultural industry has increased — it is unlikely that our agricultural organizations and private companies can increase their investment to offset the loss of federal support. Exports from the US mean many things — including more jobs and more profits.

A success story; Beef/Veal Quality Assurance — the QA program has expanded into 43 states, covering 98% of the total fed cattle marketed and at least 90% of the cow-calf producers. The beef industry has essentially a zero violative drug, chemical, and pesticide rate in fed cattle, and the level in cull beef and dairy cows is being reduced. There probably will be more emphasis on cull cows, both beef and dairy in the coming months. The incidence rate of top sirloin injection-site blemishes over the past 24 months has been reduced from 22.3% to 9.9%. All the "players" — veterinarians, allied industry, marketing sector, and packing industry are giving excellent support. The veal industry, which is closely related to the beef and dairy industries in many ways, has reduced violative residues from 3.3% in 1988 to less than .13% in 1992. Do voluntary producer-conducted and producer-funded programs work? You bet! In Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Beef Council is providing some funds to help conduct needed seminars and produce educational materials for the Quality Assurance Program.

Eat beef "anytime" says Mayo Clinic — recent Mayo Clinic health letter contained a chart outlining guidelines for low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. Foods are categorized as those that can be eaten anytime, sometimes, or seldom — and beef is one of the "eat anytime" foods provided the beef is choice or select beef round steak, sirloin, tenderloin, flank or ground round — and be the basis of the total diet. We can live with that!

Reinventing government comments — according to NCA, there are some good points and bad points in the Clinton administration reinventing government moves. Among the changes favored is the combination of agriculture research, extension service, and national agriculture library into a new Agricultural Research and Education Service. Another positive is the use of a science-based plan for food (including meat) inspection, and generally reducing federal spending. However, NCA noted that shifting the Food Safety and Inspection Service from the jurisdiction of the USDA would be an inefficient move and might damage the ongoing meat inspection reform. NCA and several other agricultural associations also took issue with the very negative reference to the E.coli-caused deaths in the USDA promotion of mandatory safe-handling labels on raw meat and poultry products. Many times the more positive approach is more effective — especially with all the improvements in meat inspection that are planned. Our meat inspection program still represents an important advantage for our meat industries over other countries.

Beef consumption to rise? — the American Meat Institute is predicting per-capita beef consumption to rise slightly in 1994, and NCA agrees. However the increase in consumption reflects increased production because of slightly increased cow herd expansion — we sell and eat all we produce at some price, stated NCA economists.

Farm-Environmentalists cooperation urged — representatives of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation (CBF) and National Cattlemen's Association (NCA) recently toured the Waffle Hill Farm, Churchville, MD, owned and operated by Lawrason Sayre and family. The Sayre family were winners of the NCA's Northeastern Regional Environmental Stewardship Award last year. CBF spokespersons indicated that the Sayre family had helped to protect the Bay from overloads of sediment and nutrients that contribute to algae blooms and loss of underwater gases. CBF and NCA agreed that farmers and environmentalists should work together and that they need each other. The 1993 Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association nominee for the NCA Environmental Stewardship Award was ErReR Hill Farm, Somerset, PA, owned by Mr. & Mrs. Sidney Riggs and managed by Bob Hay.

Spending on food continues to decrease — the share of the average US income spent on food decreased again — from 11.7% in 1991 to 11.4% in 1992. This could be taken as another indication of increased efficiency in agriculture production, but it might also mean that food is being produced by our farmers at an ever-decreasing profit margin.

Good reading — did ELSIE choose the parlor? — the doctrine of the animal rightists — is based upon a theory that humans take advantage of animals by using them, causing them pain, suffering, changed behavior, boredom, and death — was met head-on by Steven Budiansky in his book "The Covenant of the Wild: Why animals chose domestication." Among many other contentions, Budiansky suggested a bargain, of sorts, was struck between animals and humanity near the dawn of time. Simply put today's domesticated animals chose to live along with man. The animals chose this way of life because they gained a steadier supply of feed, shelter, companionship, and care. Mankind gained food, clothing, companionship, and all the other benefits that animals bring with them. This may sound like an idealistic argument, but it is one that if more people would accept, perhaps there would be less problems from activists making unsubstantiated theoretical claims which affect the amount of animal products used by our citizenry.

Ag Economist Says Poland Quickly Becoming Free-Market Country

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — "Going to Poland in 1990 was like going back to my childhood of 50 years ago. Nothing was different. It was like being able to get in a time capsule and jump back 50 years."

H. Louis Moore, Penn State professor of ag economics, recounted a series of four trips he took during a period of three years to Poland. He visited that country as part of a special training program in ag marketing conducted by the Agency for International Development in cooperation with Penn State and the governments of U.S. and Poland.

What he found — as part of a team to analyze the problems eastern European countries, particularly Poland, have in converting from communism to a free market economy — was that Poland has people willing to work and change, despite a very old infrastructure, old equipment, and old ways of thinking.

But the changes are happening quickly, according to Moore, who spoke at the 1993 Chester County Cooperative Extension annual banquet at the Government Services Center on Wednesday night.

Moore returned to Poland again in February of 1991, to the Rzeszow Province of southern Poland, an "area we thought these folks really had been left out under communism," he said.

He told the group of more than 125 at the banquet that Poland had what they considered "economists" who were no more than accountants. "They had no appreciation for what supply was, or what demand was, or what price is."

The team stayed in Poland till the following April as part of an intensive training program to bring some Western-style methods of agriculture marketing and management to the former communist country.

"The project has been one of the most successful things that has ever been done in Poland since the breakaway from communism," he said.

Poland has a population of 38 million people. About 80 percent of the farms, even during communist rule, were in private hands, but the average farm size is only about seven acres. The small-scale farms raise only enough to support a few head of livestock, but farmers generate a great deal of vegetables, particularly potatoes (Poland has the world's third largest potato crop). On the small farms, equipment used is mostly horse-drawn. Only the state farms (numbering about 4,000) and collective farms (about 2,000) have any kind of modern mechanized equipment, according to Moore. As a result, the economy is very labor-intensive. Average salary is about $150-$200 a month (in U.S. dollars).

Moore said, however, the people grow good crops in Poland. The teams were impressed with the crops, despite a lack of mechanization.

The urban areas, except for the tourist centers like Warsaw (the largest at 2.8 million people), are polluted and dismal — carryovers from communist rule. Under that rule, there was little if any incentive to improve. Conditions remained the same for decades, until the advent of satellite TV, which Moore believes helped topple communism.

In the cities, there are TV antennas everywhere. "We saw places where the TV antennas were so thick that the pigeons couldn't fly among," said Moore.

Chester County Cooperative Extension honored members for years of service at their banquet Wednesday night. From left, Betty Lou Lusky, 10 years; Toni Stuetz; Pat Taws, five years; Becky Scotland; Laurie Sandow; Trudy Doughtery, 20 years; and Alan W. Strock, five years.

"Under communism, there was no incentive for anyone to do a better job," he said. "In fact, if you went into a store, you ... were considered an inconvenience rather than something that was going to make you money, because the people weren't making any more money because you came to buy anything from them."

But pollution was widespread. "They have a major problem with sewage and other kinds of pollution in Poland," he said.

On the streets, all sorts of commodities are now sold, thanks to the conversion to a free-market economy. "As they broke from communism, the first thing that any country gets is bananas. They had no bananas before," said Moore. "Free enterprise starts right on the streets."

Moore said that as poor as the country is, there are "flower markets in every city, almost on every corner, and people stop to buy flowers to take home with them."

The important thing, according to the ag economist, was the volume of progress he saw from 1990-1993, which he considers "unbelievable." In that short time, nearly the whole country has been transformed to a free market economy.

"It is still going to take a couple of generations, probably, before their living standards become equivalent to what's in western Europe," said Moore. "I think they're going to make it."

The team went to teach at a technical school, and were invited to the students' homes at the end of their stay. "They actually cried when we left," he said. "We'd only been there three weeks, but it was like leaving family. It was a touching experience."

Also at the banquet, Don Cairns, president of the proposed new 4-H Center, spoke about the contributions received for the center, with cash pledges totaling about $200,000. That brings the total donated valoe to more than $350,000.

However, to make settlement on November 24, the center is shy about $10,000 and needs more pledges in order to make the center, a "dream of more than 20 years," a reality, according to Cairns.

Also, several extension members were honored for years of service. For five years of service, those honored were Judy Fromm, Alan W. Strock, Pat Taws, and Sarah Wallice. For 10 years of service, honored was Betty Lou Lusky. For 15 years of service, honored was Anna Mae Hughes. For 20 years of service to extension, honored was Trudy Dougherty.

Lebanon County Holds Annual Extension Banquet

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Lebanon County Extension held its annual banquet Monday evening at the Myerstown Church of the Brethren to a record turnout, according to director Alletta Schadler.

About 300 people attended the evening banquet and business meeting, including state Sen. David Brightbill, and Rep. Peter Zug. No county commissioners were present.

Dr. Paul Wangsness, the capital region director, gave a welcome and address, praising the Lebanon County Extension program, which he said is recognized as a leader in community involvement and outreach.

"We assume that people know what we do in Lebanon County Extension, and we assume they know about what we do at Penn State," he said, adding that it can be easy to take for granted the extension program, which is being used as a prototype for other former Communist Bloc countries to aid in the transition to a market economy.

"Tell people what Extension has done for you and what it can do for them," he said.

Schadler said that Lebanon County Extension recognizes the support the program receives from the citizens it serves and their political representatives.

"We're really fortunate we have the resources available to us through Penn State University through our tax dollars, and from the county commissioners through our tax dollars," Schadler said.

The budget for Lebanon Extension program last year was $119,688, except for the rental on the 2-year-old ag center building. Rent for the year was $78,500.

Except for Delbert Voight, who was hired last week to serve as the county's agronomic specialist and is expected to be working with USDA Soil Conservation Service as nutrient management planning gets underway, the county's extension staff consists of three fulltime people who serve within the county; five whose main office is in Lebanon, but who serve a multi-county region; three secretaries and two summer assistants.

There are also five consultants who receive payment with funds appropriated by the Lebanon County Commissioners and funds generated by user fees.

The county also receives help through 141 volunteers. A number of volunteers received awards for years service, from 5 years to more than 35 years.

In total, there were 18,380 recorded instances or events in which a represenative of Lebanon County Extension provide support to an individual within the county during fiscal year 1993.

The key speaker was Dr. Robert Bauer, a master gardner and volunteer who gave an hour-long talk on the development of gardens, from ancient Mesopotamia through Rome, Germany, and as interpreted in England and here, and he gave a slide show of the variety of gardens he visited while on a recent trip to England.

A number of Master Gardners were recognized and presented with awards, including Deborah Hartman who was named the 1993 Pennsylvania Master Gardner.

In order to qualify as a Master Gardner, an applicant must receive at least 13 hours of instruction and give at least 50 hours of community service helping to answer gardening questions and assisting other countians with their horticultural needs.

... election of five board members was also held with Sara Jane Krall, Alvena Kneasel, Dorothy Moyer, Enos Heisey, and Amos Balsbaugh being reelected.

ible as we'd like."

Fisher said the goal of the National Pork Producers Council is to eradicate the disease by the turn of the century. "So, if we're still in the pseudorabies business in 1999, and the other 48 states have cleaned it up, what are they going to do with us? They're going to clean it up — the rest of the states are going to force us. We're not going to be able to ship market hogs out of the states if we have pseudorabies and the rest of the area is clean. The rules will get tougher and tougher."

Fisher remembers well what it was like when herds were depopulated in the early 1980s. "It was such a traumatic thing to deal with ... when the only outlook you had if you got it was that you were going to depopulate in two years, it was a traumatic issue and people are still scared of it. They're scared of anybody that has to do with the state, and there are some people who just don't want to hear about it. They've been depopulated, lost $80,000-$100,000 — lost it — come back in, and now they're (thinking) just leave me alone, I'm OK, I don't want it, leave me alone."

Editor's Note: What can producers do to improve biosecurity? Details of a special meeting to address the topics of biosecurity and PRV control will be provided, in addition to a new project to examine the economics of a PRV vaccine, in part 2 of the series in the next issue of Lancaster Farming.

Chester County Holds 4-H Dairy Awards Banquet

ATGLEN (Chester Co.) — The Chester County 4-H Dairy and Dairy Goat awards banquet was held last week at the West Fallowfield Christian School. A dinner was served to 100 4-H'ers and their families and friends.

The Oxford and Manor 4-H dairy clubs were in charge of the affair and various 4-H members of the clubs conducted the meeting with Michael Troop, Cochranville serving as the emcee. Theresa Imhoff, Chester County dairy princess, gave a talk about dairy farming.

Rus Albright, Keystone Farm Credit, gave the group an update on the Chester County 4-H Center. Settlement for the 20 acres of land along Rt. 322 will take place on November 24 and the drive to raise funds for building construction and ground improvement is progressing but more support is needed. He urged all 4-H members and their families to contribute to the fund with whatever money they can afford and he also displayed the tentative development plan for the site. John St. John announced that there will be a sale of donated dairy animals in the spring of 1994 as the dairy industry's means of raising funds for the 4-H center, and he asked for support from dairy farmers throughout the county.

The Tri-Community 4-H Dairy Club had the entertainment at the end of the meeting which was a pantomine skit with two of the members reading an amusing narrative.

The 4-H Dairy Goat awards were presented first. Trophies were presented to the high individual project book scores in each club based on the quality and completeness of their book and their performance at the county roundups in July. Theresa Holz, Phoenixville captured the high Achievement Award for the Chester County Kids Club, while Melissa Wertz, Phoenixville was the best first year member. In the New London Club, Laura Anderson, Landenberg, had the top project award. Awards were also presented to the fitting and showing champions and the breed champions from Chester County 4-H Dairy Goat Roundup this past summer. Show halters were given by the Holz family to Becky Hendricks, Phoenixville, and Kathleen Anderson, Landenberg, for being the top fitter and showperson, respectfully, of the show.

The top Achievement Award for dairy based on the total project score was won by Erica Lloyd, Pottstown, with her Jersey cow project on Patrick Joyce. Other Achievement Award winners were Krystal St. John, Lincoln University of the Oxford Dairy Club with her sister, Kasey St. John having the best first year project book. In the Manor Dairy Club, Kathryn Young, West Grove was the winner. Erica Lloyd, Pottstown captured the award in the Tri-Community Club while Crystal Kolb, Pottstown was the first year winner. In the Chester Valley Dairy Club, Theresa Holz, Phoenixville had the top award.

Production awards, based on M.E., 305 day records, 2X were given to the top entries in three breeds. The Ayrshire winner for milk and fat was Dreamnol Johnny's Snow with 25,716 pounds of milk and 1016 pounds of fat entered by Kevin A. Nolan, Cochranville. Kevin Nolan, Cochranville also had the high Holstein for milk and fat, PA-Dot Bell Jesse Paulette-ET with 33,746 pounds of milk and 1073 pounds of fat. Hewitts Brass Rosalinda, owned by Vicky Hewitt, Spring City, was the high Jersey cow for milk with 19,567 pounds. Ben Hendricks, Phoenixville was tops in the Jersey breed for fat with TOH Silver Beacon Twinkie, who had 1,117 pounds fat.

Farm Credit awards to dairy members for excellence in a wide variety of 4-H activities went to Robert Bari, Phoenixville for the Senior Award, a $50 savings bond, and a $25 cash award went to Erica Lloyd, Pottstown as the junior winner. In the 4-H Dairy Goat division, Jason Wagner, Spring City received the $50 savings bond and Melissa Wertz won the $25 junior award.

PHEAA To Continue Loan Forgiveness

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the second year, the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) will implement the Agriculture Education Loan Forgiveness Program, according to state Rep. Jeffrey Coy.

The program, created in 1992 by the General Assembly, helps graduates in agriculture-related fields and veterinary medicine repay their student loans. They must return to work on a family farm or practice veterinary medicine that includes agriculture animals.

"This program offers up to $2,000 per year to pay PHEAA-guaranteed student loans for every year the individual is employed on the family farm or practices as a vet," Coy said.

Coy said the program set a maximum of $10,000 in loan forgiveness payments.

Additional criteria that must be met in order for an individual to be eligible for the program includes graduation from a Pennsylvania college or university; certification by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to sign health certificates required for interstate commerce of ag animals and animal products; the authorization to certify regulatory testing; employment on a family farm that is being used for the production of commercial agricultural products, and these farms must devote 75 percent or more of their assets to the business of agriculture.

Interested individuals may obtain an application by calling (717) 975-3320 or by writing to: Agriculture Education Loan Forgiveness Program, P.O. Box 8114, Harrisburg, PA 17105-8114.

Cooperatives Present

respect for Hal Doran, for what he stands for, and his impact on cooperatives world-wide. Roth emphasized the need to constantly look ahead, to always consider how cooperatives can meet the needs of members in a changing world - the speeding up of technology, increasing worldwide involvement, and the movement of production agriculture away from family farms and a way of life to family business. Roth said the concept of cooperative operations are being challenged and that co-ops need to constantly look at how they can address member needs in order to serve. He ended with a reminder that cooperatives are always made up of the membership.

The 1993 annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives was held November 2-3 at the Nittany Lion Inn in State College and was this organizations tribute to "60 years of service to the cooperative community".

Crystal Smithmyer serves as Executive Director for the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives. Through the years, the PCC has served to promote the concept of cooperative efforts - believing that by working together, more can be accomplished than by working alone - and provides educational, informational, governmental and professional services to its 30 agricultural and rural cooperative members. The PCC annual meeting was hosted by Nationwide Mutual Insurance Company.

Sisters Open Christmas Market

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BOALSBURG (Mifflin Co.) — Everyone loves a chance to shop early — especially for the holidays.

And what better place to find quality handcrafted country crafts, decorations and gifts made from fabric, wood, and beeswax than at a Christmas Market.

That's what sisters Denise Imbrogno and Dianne Hepler, along with their sisters-in-law Mary Jo Spangler and Donna Spangler, had in mind three years ago when they decided to bring all their crafts and artwork together for a Christmas open house in the country. The first Christmas Market took place in the original Spanger homestead in New Berlin, home to fourth generation Harmony Springs Dairy farm run by brothers Dan and Dennis Spangler — an 18th century two-story frame farmhouse with a huge fireplace and deep windowsills. This year's Christmas Market in New Berlin was held November 5 and 6, and will continue at Denise's home in Boalsburg, November 19 and 20.

When Denise opens her two-story gray colonial home in Boalsburg, located in the Kaywood Estate development, as a Christmas Market, shoppers can expect to be surrounded by all the sights, sounds, and smells of Christmas.

"We all had done some crafts on our own and they complimented each other," said Denise, who also said the idea of a Christmas Market began with an article they saw in Lancaster Farming.

Santas, snowmen, angels, toy soldiers, wreaths, ornaments, stenciling, fashion accessories, and Fraktur Folk Art — each person adds their own personal touch and trade secrets to make just what shoppers and decorators are looking for.

Denise paints most of the wooden ornaments, many done in barn or brick red with a Santa face, makes three-foot high fence post Santas, snowmen, and soldiers, paints wooden trees and gingerbread men, Santa bobbin spools, and Santas cow bells.

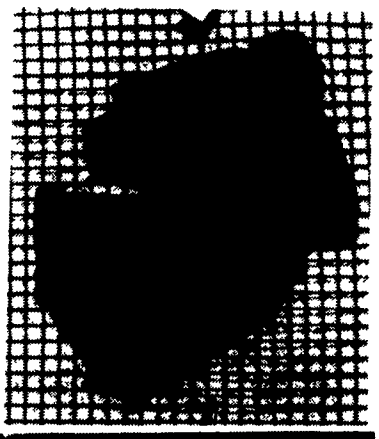
Dianne Hepler of Pitman creates gifts from fabric and paints fashion accessories. Her ornamental birdhouses are from boards from an old barn dated 1910, and she enjoys making wooden necklaces and pins. But her favorite is antiquing material. Dianne uses her own secret product to antique muslin to make stuffed and stenciled welcome signs to hang on door knobs, and others country cloth items.

Mary Jo Spangler of New Berlin makes molded beeswax ornaments, paints them and finishes with an antique stain. She has collected all the Longenberger molds and forms bears, sheep, santas, angels, and the old fashioned St. Nick. The aroma from these is surely a welcome Christmas smell.

The Spangler's 18th Century farmhouse is home to Donna Spangler's Fraktur Art showroom and studio year round. Here, she takes the Pennsylvania German Folk Art and intertwines her own personal artistic style to create favorite sayings, family trees, wedding and birth announcements — all designed to become lasting family gifts from one generation to the next. Donna uses the Fraktur symbols — the dove, the stem of the vine, and the flowers for Christ, a heart for agape (the love of God), and the leaves for new-born believers — for her art. She is a juried member of the Pa. Guild of Craftsmen.

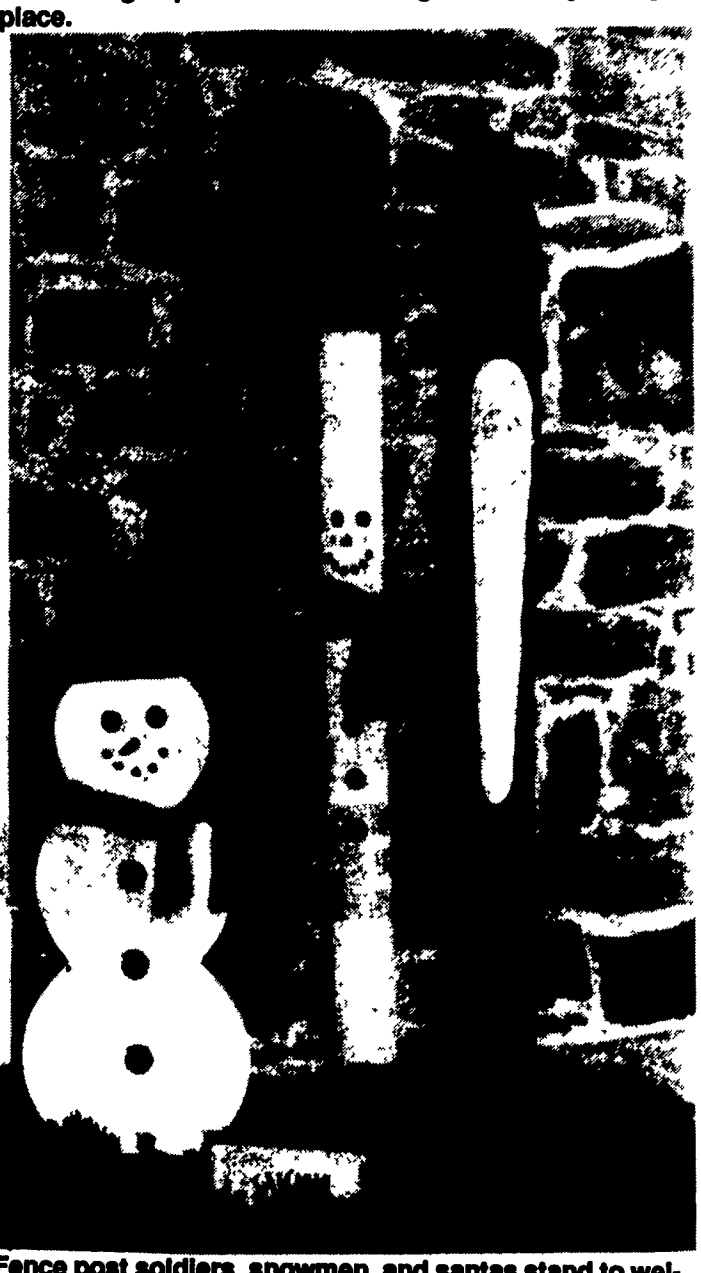
The Christmas Market in New Berlin and Boalsburg for next year is tentatively set for the first weekend in November, early enough for shoppers to find Christmasy country crafts straight from country crafters.

For more information about the Christmas Market in Boalsburg November 19 and 20, call Denise Imbrogno at (814) 466-2260. For more Fraktur Folk Art details, call Donna Spangler at (717) 966-2624.



Dianne Hepler makes fashion accessories and cloth crafts for the Christmas Market.

Christmasy country crafts blend well in an 18th century stone farm house on Harmony Springs Farm in New Berlin. Fraktur Folk Art verses, painted Santa bricks, wooden Christmas tree cutouts, "Welcome Friends" brick door stop, stenciled gift bags, and stuffed and antiqued "Seasons Greetings" pillows line the long wall facing a huge fireplace.



Fence post soldiers, snowmen, and santas stand to welcome visitors to the Christmas Market in New Berlin.

What's a Christmas Market without Santa's. The Spangler homestead, Harmony Springs Farm in New Berlin, opens it's doors one November weekend each year for a Christmas Market of quality handcrafted country items.

"Where's Marvina?"

Luckily no one was around, or they would have asked why I was talking to myself. Again.

Having gone into the barn just prior to starting evening milking chores. I'd noticed that one of the box stall doors was hanging open. Stall resident Marvina was nowhere in sight.

A big, old, tame cow, Marvina has long been a favorite of ours among the girls in the herd. She knows where she belongs, goes there when she comes into the barn and causes few disruptions by running up and down the alley or jumping into stalls that belong to other herd members.

Our vet has often commented on how he likes this particular cow. Even the classifier on his last visit paid per the honor of scoring her as high as he could without making her Excellent, since her udder was absolutely bone-dry at the time. Having a dry cow scored Excellent is almost unheard of.

This old cow possesses some genetic, inborn high-strung tendencies. Her sire was a bull called Astronaut, aptly named as it turned out, because most of his daughters quickly went "into orbit" over the slightest non-routine event. As Astronaut daughters go, Marvina might be considered one of the more laid back of his offspring.

A few years ago, she managed to completely slice off a teat from her udder in an accident with a piece of metal. Though we were devastated and fearful of how we would ever handle her inbred nervousness through a painful injury, our fears turned out to be unfounded. She barely even lifted a foot through the treatment and healing process. That quarter of her udder ceased to produce milk and has not caused her a single problem since.

But where was she now? Probably at the far end of the feed alley, with her muzzle buried deep in a feed cart piled full of corn. That's where escapees generally gravitate to, gulping down snitched feed so fast they can hardly swallow, as if knowing they will promptly be caught.

Then I glanced up — and there stood Marvina.

She had apparently made her trek around the feed alley which runs the length of the barn in front of both rows of cows. Either she had eaten her fill — or the carts were empty. I unfastened the protective chain which was still up across one of the alleyways. She strolled to the pen's open door and stepped inside, with a distinct aloofness that silently questioned why it had taken me so long to notice her there.

Most of our cows are of relatively calm temperament, like Marvina, primarily because cows that are "kickers" are just too dangerous to fool with very long. But then you have those inevitable bovine individuals that are more irritating than they are dangerous. Cows like Pokey.

Pokey is badly-named. Dancer — or even Clogger — would be more descriptive of her nature. She has the nervous habit of constantly lifting her left foot while being milked. Never the right foot, just the left. And, because she's always dancing with that left foot, she keeps working a little closer and a little closer to the next cow on her left.

After her "dry" period vacation, Pokey recently calved and came back into the milking string. Figuring she always wanted to wiggle to the left when being milked from the right, we switched her to the opposite side of the barn, where she would be milked from the left. Maybe it would serve to neutralize her tendency to drift sideways in her stall.

Good theory, huh? 'Cept, it didn't work. Pokey immediately found that by "clogging" with her left foot, she could stomp the milker hoses and remove the pesty machine that was distracting her from stuffing her face with silage. After a couple of milkings with that routine, we threw up our hands and switched her back to being right-side milked. She hasn't removed the milker since.

Cow, 1; humans, 0.

Such aggravating cow habits make Marvina's harmless escape and return trips look downright amusing.

I thought about Pokey — and gave Marvina a hug.

Taking Time to Celebrate Families

Last week I spent three wonderful days in Lebanon County sharing my ideas about keeping families in touch. I wonder as I'm writing this column if I met anyone reading this while I was there. That program is helping me to gear up for National Family Week.

National Family Week is celebrated annually during the week of Thanksgiving. Researchers Dr. Nick Stinnett, Dr. John DeFrain, Dr. Kerry Kerber and Professor Lois Schwab cooperated on a project to answer the question, "How do families succeed?". I thought he answer to that question woudl be an appropriate one to explore in anticipation of National Family Week.

These researchers identified six common traits that were essential to these families' success. They found that successful families spend time together, practice healthy communication patterns, show appreciation for one another, and develop and use coping skills. They also observed that the family members displayed a strong sense of commitment to each other and shared a common set of spiritual values that focused on giving and receiving love and having mutual trust.

In fact as they studied, they observed that "healthy" families were not necessarily families that had an absence of problems but rather families who used their trust, love, and other family strengths to effectively address those problems.

I encourage you to focus on these six qualities to strengthen your own family in 1993. Clip the following paragraphs and save them as a "to do" list for Thanksgiving week.

* Sunday, November 12st: Today is the kick-off day for National Family Week. Relax as a family and browse through the ideas listed below to plan your week's activities.

* Monday, November 22nd: Focus on commitment. This is a promise of time and energy to help other family members reach their potentials. Try the activity "Who Can Help Me?". List items or situations in which someone in your family needs help in one column on a sheet of paper.

Examples might be checking homework, opening a door, fixing a clock or reading the directions for a game. Then in a second column ask who can help. Usually someone else in the family can help. Look there first. Then make a plan to share those talents the next time the situation arises.

* Tuesday, November 23rd: Focus on spirituality/family wellness. At some point today say "I love you" to each member of your family. Add a hug for emphasis.

* Wednesday, November 24th: Focus on communication. Pay attention to other people's comments today. Try to empathize with the person who is speaking instead of giving advice or saying, "Oh, I'm sure he didn't mean it. You shouldn't feel that way." Today is likely to be hectic. Accept and help others name their feelings. Don't be bashful—name the feelings you're having too.

* Thursday, November 25th: Focus on appreciation. As you share a Thanksgiving Day meal together, have each person mention something about another individual at the table that she appreciates or is thankful for. If you are not gathering with your family, set aside a few quiet moments today to jot these "appreciation notes" on a postcard and sent them to people you love. Even at a distance you can help preserve and nurture families.

* Friday, November 26th: Focus on time together. Between or instead of football games, turn the TV off and play a card game, put a puzzle together or cook up a treat in the kitchen. If you are separated from family, arrange to visit someone elseo who may be spending the holiday weekend alone and share time together.

* Saturday, November 27th: Focus on coping skills. Play "What if...". Describe problem circumstances and let others in the group problem solve. Who knows, these may be experiences they will really encounter in the weeks and years ahead. (And don't forget to read this week's Taking Time column in Lancaster Farming!)

Horticulture Hints

O In late fall the nights are much longer than the days and the sun is lower in the sky. These conditions mean that house plants are receiving reduced natural light. Position your plants so that they receive maximum light by moving them closer to windows and adjusting curtains and blinds.

O Use your microwave to dry flower petals from cut flower bouquets for potpourri. Spread flower petals in a single layer on a paper towel and place in the microwave along with a cup half full of water. Microwave for one minute on full power. Check them to see if they are dry; if not, rotate the towel one half turn and microwave the petals ten seconds longer. Poinsettia, rose and gerbera flower petals microwave well and will retain their bright colors.

O This is the ideal time to lime your vegetable garden or lawn. Take a soil test first to accurately assess how much lime is needed.

O Leaves will compost three times faster if they are shredded before being placed in the compost pile.

O Hardy mums that were placed in large containers this fall will survive the winter better if they are moved into an area where they will not be subjected to sub zero temperatures and drying winds. If possible relocate the containers to an unheated garage or storage shed. Water the plants well before moving and check them during the winter to be sure they don't get bone dry.

When building a 2WD tractor, there's little reason to conserve weight. In fact, you may well end up adding weight for traction.

With 4WD tractors, you really don't need, or even want so much weight. It just makes the tractor less maneuverable, hurts performance, lowers efficiency and increases soil compaction.

MF 300 Series 4WD tractors are engineered with just the right weight, balance and strength for optimum 4WD performance. This means easy handling, with all the performance of bigger, more expensive tractors.

Smart engineering is just one of the many reasons why, over the last 28 years, more people have selected Massey Ferguson tractors than any other brand. Check out all the reasons today at your MF dealer.

Designed from the beginning for 4WD performance.

Wheels don't lean on full lock, reducing soil damage and tire wear

Standard hydrostatic steering for fast, easy turns and precise handling.

Low-rate MF financing for qualified buyers makes ownership easy.

Hydralock front-wheel differential engages automatically with rear differential lock.

'Try Honey' Is The Message Two Women Carry Across State

ST. THOMAS (Franklin Co.) — When it comes to cooking with honey, the tables have certainly turned. Once relegated to desserts and tea time, honey has moved from the back of the cupboard to the forefront of the food world.

And things have never tasted better. That's the message Pennsylvania Honey Queen Stephanie Lynn Yoder and Pennsylvania Honey Princess Jennifer Sue Henry tell the crowds at fairs, malls, markets, parades and civic organizations where they promote honey.

Queen Stephanie has been watching her grandfather, Jacob Sollenberger raised honey bees ever since she was born. Her grandfather started raising honeybees during World War II when sugar was scarce. After the war, sugar was plentiful but by then, the family was hooked on the sweet taste of honey.

Her grandfather is still a beekeeper and has hives on Stephanie's parents' dairy farm. Nineteen-year-old Stephanis is the daughter of Samuel and Barbara Yoder of St. Thomas. She has a younger brother, Daniel, and the family has cared for many foster children over the years.

Music is a strong interest for Stephanie. She is a freshman at Messiah College majoring in music education. She plays the piano and saxophone. Before graduation from James Buchanan High School, Stephanie was active in music programs, student government, and track. She is active at West Side Brethren In Christ Church with youth and a full-time pianist since the eighth grade.

In addition to being the state honey queen, Stephanie is on her second term as Franklin County Honey Queen. She will compete for the title of American Honey Queen in Orlando, Florida in January.

Honey Princess Jennifer Sue Henry is the 20-year-old daughter of Marvin and Mary Henry of McVeytown, Mifflin County. She has a younger brother, Justin.

Jennifer can trace back her family's commercial beekeeping for three generations. Often visiting Pap and Grandm (Merle and Emily Fisher) at the farm, she got a look at what it takes to be a beekeeper. Her dad also has a few hives.

Jennifer graduated from Lewistown Area High School and is a junior at Juniata College majoring in elementary education.

She has always been active in sports, especially basketball, and plays for the Juniata College basketball team. For the past two summers, Jennifer cunseled camps for the Keystone State Basketball Camp Progam. Her activities include 4-H, cross country, and downhill skiing.

As an active member of McVeytown United Methodist Church, Jennifer has held offices in it and in the United Methodist Youth Fellowship.

Many of the recipes featured on the Home and Range pages have come from Honey Queen Stephanie and Honey Princess Jennifer Sue. If you would like more information on honey or on having one of these representatives speak to your club, contact the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers' Association, Honey Queen chairperson Becky Fisher Gerhart, 66 S. Manor St., Mountville, PA 17554.

Add Honey The Golden Touch

Honey is pure, wholesome and natural. The flavor and color of honey varies greatly because it is dependent upon the bee's nectar source. Typically, lighter colored honeys are milder in flavor than the darker honeys. Experiment with different flavors. The darker flavors may taste best in baked goods and the lighter flavors for uncooked uses.

Store honey at room temperature, the best spot is your dining room table. Do not refrigerate as it hastens granulation.

Crystallization is a natural process for honey; it does not mean the honey is spoiled. If honey becomes crystallized, place the honey jar in a pan of hot water (do not set jar directly on bottom of the pan or use boiling water) or microcook for 30 second intervals until the honey has re-liquified.

To replace sugar with honey: Substitute ⅔ cup honey per cup of sugar. Reduce amount of liquid by ¼ cup for each cup honey used. Lower baking temperature by 25 degrees. In baked goods, add ½ teaspoon baking soda for each cup honey used.

Most of these recipes are from Pennsylvania Honey Queen Stephanie Lynn Yoder and from Pennsylvania Honey Princess Jennifer Sue Henry.

"School is back in session and watching football games is the past time. With these activities come snacks," said Diane Myers, Cumberland County Dairy Princess.

She suggests using cheese snacks. Cheese contains some essential vitamins and minerals, calcium and protein — all needed by active children for daily life.

Diane is the daughter of Richard and Ethel Myers of Boiling Springs. The family raises corn, wheat, and hay and milk Holsteins on their Bubble Hollow Farm.

Diane is studying agricultural science at Penn State. Here is a recipe from Diane, who was the county alternate last year.

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — The District IV Make It Yourself With Wool contest was held here in the Tropical Courtyard of the Ramada Inn at the Pa. Turnpike exit.

Gretchen Fox, obviously an up and coming seamstress, was noted for doing an outstanding job in the junior category.

Names of the other participants are Julie Sechler, Corby Svonavec, and Delaine Swearman, all junior contestants.

Christy Wysocki was mistress of ceremonies during the grand finale fashion show which began after lunch.

Fran Frazier, Cindy Walker, and Marsha Wysocki were the event judges, examining the garment construction and how well it suited the person who made and wore it.

Kristin Long, the Somerset Co. Lamb and Wool Queen, was the event hostess. Monitors were Christine Long and Erica Walker.

District IV includes Bedford, Blair, Cambria, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon and Somerset Counties.

Adult and senior participants in the District IV Make It Yourself With Wool contest, held in Somerset are, from left, Jenn Black, Jill Clites, Ruth Goddard and Rose Svonavec. Black and Goddard were named winners and will enter the state contest.

Cook's Question Corner

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Lou Ann Good, Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send a SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address.

QUESTION — Ruth Cantello, Somerset, N.J., would like recipes for food gifts that are suitable for mailing.

QUESTION — Sheryl Wolfe, Wellsboro, would like homemade bread recipes made without yeast using all purpose flour. She especially wants a peanut bread recipe made without yeast.

QUESTION — Brenda Bradish, Latrobe, would like a cookie recipe for peanut butter logs. The inside of the cookie tastes like Zagnut candy bars and is rolled in either nuts or coconut.

QUESTION — Louise Graybeal, Renick, W.Va., would like recipes for low-fat sauces, vegetables, noodles, and lean meats — but not for seafood. She writes that she had gallons of cod liver oil as a child (long before the nice little pills that kids eat now) so therefore she doesn't like fish. She doesn't like apple butter either since she had to take a spoonful of apple butter with a spoonful of the cod liver oil.

QUESTION — Carole Nace, Mifflintown, would like a recipe for chocolate trifle.

QUESTION — Joann Fritz, Ickesburg, would like a recipe for sweet and sour salad dressing.

QUESTION — Carla Harman, Nescopeck, would like recipes using chestnuts, especially for chestnut stuffing, and what is the best way to remove the shells?

QUESTION — A faithful reader from Seven Valleys would like a recipe for Spanish Rice.

QUESTION — Barbara Abrell, Winchester, Va., would like a recipe for Amish Macaroni Salad.

QUESTION — Bette Lawrence, Honesdale, would like a recipe for pear jam or pear jelly that uses green tomatoes as an ingredient.

QUESTION — Effie Sanders, Gettysburg, would like a potato candy recipe. As she recalls a potato is cooked and mashed, confectioners' sugar is added. The mixture is flattened and spread with peanut butter and rolled up a like a jelly roll and sliced.

ANSWER — Rebecca Johnson, Millville, wanted a recipe for Amish Cinnamon Bread. Thanks to Linda Brandt, Shippensburg, for sending the recipe.

Amish Cinnamon Bread

1⅔ cups starter dough (sour dough)
1 cup vegetable oil
1 cup sugar
2 cups flour
2 tablespoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
4 eggs
1 box instant vanilla pudding mix
1 cup raisins, optional
1 cup nuts, optional

Stir well. Pour into 2 greased and sugared pans or a bundt pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour.

ANSWER — Verna Howell, Schnecksville, requested a recipe for Carrot and Raisin Sauce. Thanks to Sherry Craner, Bridgeton, N.J., who sent the following recipe, without measurements but which experienced cooks can be adapted to the amount needed. It is made similar to gravy.

Carrot And Raisin Sauce

Carrots, cut in desired shape
Raisins (dark and light)
Water to cover
Brown sugar
Corn starch and water mixture

Cook carrots and raisins in water until tender. Add brown sugar to taste and bring to a boil Thicken with mixture made from corn starch and water.

ANSWER — Lisa Zimmerman, Lancaster, wanted to know what she is doing wrong because her macaroni and cheese always gets curdly. Thanks to Sherry Craner, Bridgeton, N.J., who writes that sharp and cheddar cheese separates and appears curdly; some people like it like that. If you do not, use a mild cheese such as American. When the Craner family visits her stepmother in Chestertown, Md., she makes three different kids of macaroni and cheese — thick, thin, and curdley — that way everyone is happy.

Sensibly Delicious Chocolate Chip Cookies

3 cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cups packed dark brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup margarine, softened
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 egg whites
⅓ cup water
2 cups semi-sweet chocolate morsels
½ cup chopped nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine flour, baking soda and salt in medium bowl. Cream brown sugar, granulated sugar, margarine, and vanilla in large mixer bowl. Beat in egg whites. Gradually beat in dry ingredients alternately with water. Stir in morsels and nuts. Drop by rounded tablespoon onto lightly greased baking sheets. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes or until centers are set. Cool for 2 minutes. Remove to wire racks to cool completely.

Makes about 5 dozen cookies. Each cookie contains 4 grams of fat versus 7 grams in traditional recipe.

ANSWER — J. Haugh, Red Lion, wanted a recipe to make fresh apple cake made with a boxed cake mix. No one has sent a recipe, but here is an easy one that my family loves.

Gingerbread Up-Side Down Cake

2 large apples, sliced fine
2 tablespoons butter, melted

ANSWER — Dorothy E. Miller, Bruceton Mills, W. Va., wanted a recipe for apple pie made with sour cream or custard. Thanks to Judith Zimmerman, Lebanon; Peg Koser, Lancaster; Alverna Martin, Wellsboro; Louise Graybeal, Renick, W.Va.; Martha Nolt, East Earl; and others that sent recipes.

Amish Apple Pie

Streusel:
⅓ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup brown sugar
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon grated nutmeg
Speck salt
½ cup butter, cold
½ cup coarsely chopped English walnuts
4 cups baking apples, sliced
1 unbaked 10-inch pie shell
1 cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 egg
1 cup heavy whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a food processor, mix together sugars, flour, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Add butter and process until mixture is crumbly. It should have a dry look to it. Don't over process. Add nuts; set aside.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Peel, core, and thinly slice apples. Place apples in pie shell. In a small bowl, mix the sugar, flour and cinnamon. Beat the egg in a medium bowl and add cream and vanilla. Add sugar mixture to the egg mixture and blend. Pour over apples. Bake for 1 hour in the lower rack of oven. After 20 minutes, sprinkle streusel over the top and continue baking approximately 40 minutes longer or until top puffs and is golden brown.

Pie is thick and rich. Serves 10-12 people.

TWO EASY GUIDES FOR HEALTHFUL EATING

First we had the Dietary Guidelines for Americans issued by the United States Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in 1990. Then in 1992, they published the Food Guide Pyramid. The nutrition guidelines behind these two guides are the same. Among them are:

Reduce the amount of fat in our diets. Nearly 30 percent of the fat calories in the average diet come from meat, fish and poultry. Nutrition scientists suggest limiting ourselves to no more than 2 or 3 servings of these food per day, for a total of about 6 ounces. They also recommend choosing lean cuts, trimming fat from meats, removing skin from poultry and enoying a meatless meal now and then.

Increase the fruits and vegetables in our daily meals and snacks. On the average, American adults include only about 3-1/2 servings in their daily diets from these two food groups. Both the Dietary Guidelines and the Food Guide Pyramid recommend 2 to 4 servings from the Fruit Group and 3 to 5 servings from the Vegetable Group.

Consume more whole-grain foods among the 6 to 11 servings recommended from the Bread, Cereal, Rice and Pasta Group. The average American consumes less than 1/2 serving of whole-grain food daily, while nutrition experts say we need at least 3 servings every day. These might include whole-grain bread, brown rice and whole-grain cereals.

The pyramid and the dietary guidelines are really part of the same recommendation to eat more healthfully. If you would like to have your own personal copy of each of these, contact your local county extension office.

Blind Dog Plays Ball, Herds Cattle, Knows Boundaries

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Like most farm families Nancy and Ardith Waltz have a dog that roams free on the land.

Visit the Manheim farm tucked in back of a winding farm lane, and Jody will greet you with a friendly wag of the tail. When Nancy or Ardith call Jody, the Australian Blue Heeler, is off and running.

There is no hesitation, no awkward gait or confused whining to indicate that Jody is different than other dogs.

But 9-year-old Jody does not have eyes. Two years ago, glaucoma, an eye disease, erupted swiftly, and both eyes needed to be removed.

The Waltz family was devastated. They thought that Jody would need to be put to sleep.

But they found a veteranian who assured them that in 10 days Jody would adjust to the blindness and find ways to cope.

"She adjusted quicker than we did," Nancy said. "She never showed that she was in pain, never complained."

The feisty dog was soon following Nancy around as confident as if she could see with both eyes.

Although Jody mingles freely with the many cats on the farm, she is off and chasing if one of the cats takes off running.

"Dogs are just like children," Nancy said. "Lots of TLC (tender, loving care) is everything she needs."

Nancy said that the family has a special affinity for Jody because it's like having a handicapped child even though she doesn't act handicapped.

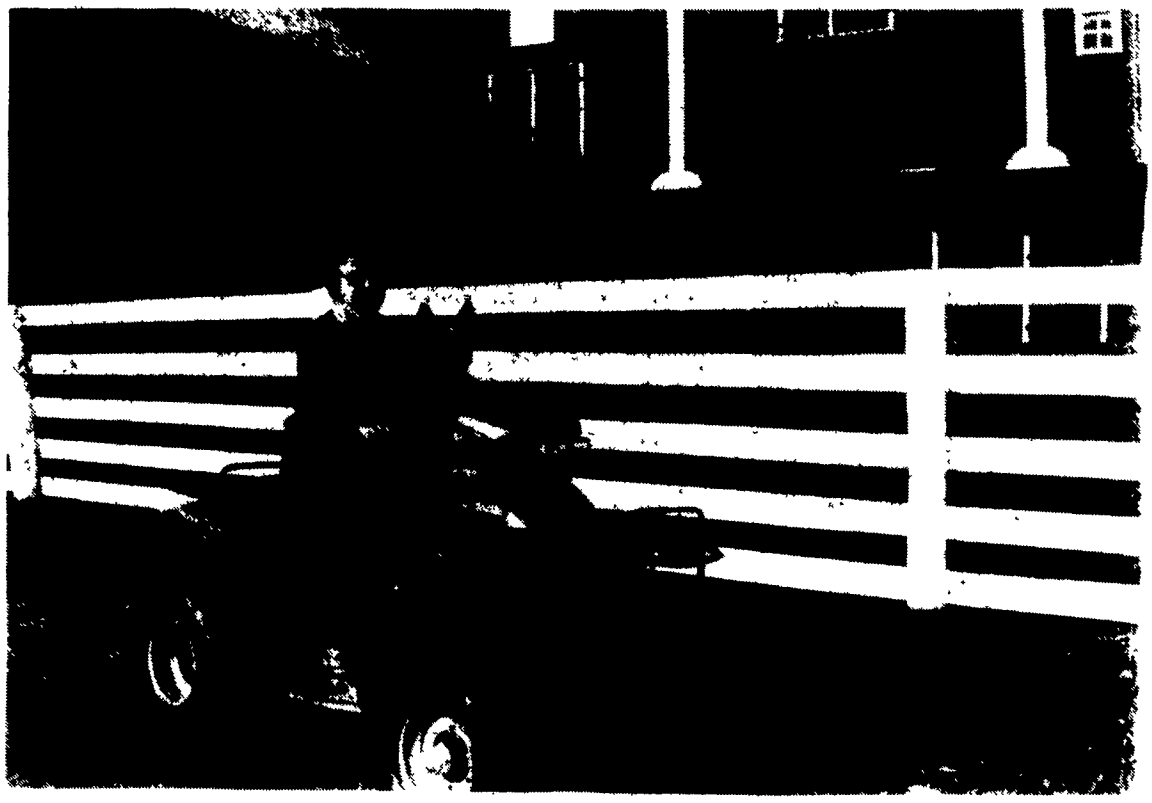
"She's a real joy," she said.

Because the dog was so well acquainted with the farm before her eyes were removed, Jody knew instinctively where to find open doors, her bed, food, and other necessities. The one thing the Waltz family does is string baler twine across the bottom of upper barn doors to warn the dog to stop. They put hay bales at the bottom of hay holes so that if Jody falls, the hay will provide a soft landing.

But, Jody is an amazing dog who by and large seems to be able to fend for herself. She does not bump into things when going from one place to another. When Nancy starts the 4-wheeler, Jody leaps up for a ride. She likes tractor rides around the 89 acres that the Waltzes plant in corn, tobacco, wheat, and hay. The purebred Black Angus and Charolais-cross cattle that the Waltz's raise on the farm is another attraction for Jody even though she cannot see them.

"Losing eyes no reason to get rid of a dog," Nancy said. "The expense to remove them is worth it."

The vet told us that most people don't want dogs without eyes. The New Jersey vet, who specilizes in ophthalmology (diseases of the eye), travels to different clinics across the states to help dogs like Jody. If the disease is caught in time, it can often be treated with medication. Since the operation to remove the eyes, Jody does not need to take any special medication.

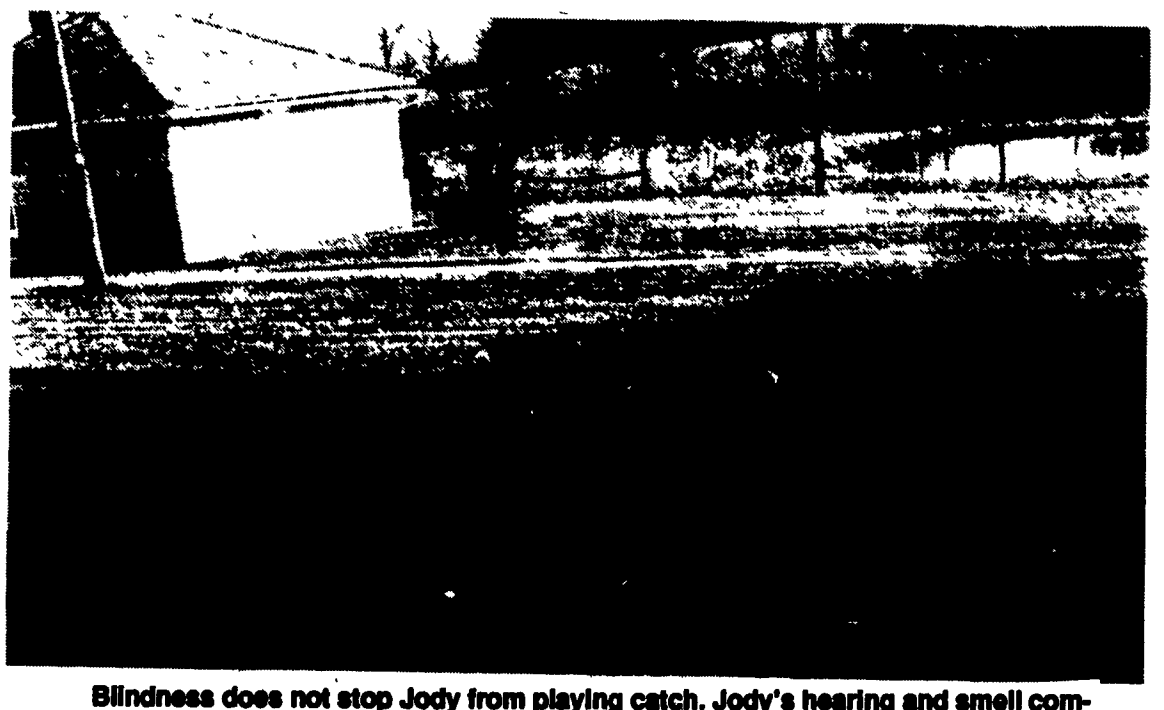


A 4-wheeler ride around the farm with Nancy is one of Jody's favorite activities. The red barns and buildings surrounded by rolling acreage, a pond, and trees, make Ridge Field Farm one of the most attractive farms in the area.

Although she can no longer see, the instincts of the Australian Heeler breed remain intact as Jody waits for Nancy's command to herd cattle on the Waltz farm.

Both of Jody's eyes have been removed but she can retrieve the ball for her master or mistress because she depends upon smell and sound to guide her.

Jody cannot see, but her sense of smell and hearing direct her to a face-to-face confrontation with one of the herd being raised for direct sales of beef on Ridge Field Farm.



Blindness does not stop Jody from playing catch. Jody's hearing and smell compensates for the loss of sight. As long as she can hear the ball zinging through the air, she's off and running to retrieve it.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

November might be a dreary month but it brings its own special activities. While I spent 14 hours sitting at our local polling place registering one-third of our registered voters, my husband spent the day walking through the woods looking for signs of turkey in Snyder County. He tells me that there was three inches of snow on the ground and he saw two deer.

We were not very busy on Election Day but we did get to see some neighbors that we had not seen since the primaries in the spring. Many of the voters in our district come from retirement communities and are handicapped and need help in order to vote. A lot of young people do not even bother to vote at all.

In these last few weeks before winter really arrives, I've found a few hours to go fishing here on our farm. It is surrounded by the Conestoga River and in many places the banks are very steep. Cottages along the shore have some 30 steps to the waters edge. Usually I can catch several small fish but when I catch a big fish it makes me very happy. Unless — the fish gets away just as I lift it from the water because I did not bring the net. That is a disappointment! I've been using the earthworms that I found under the ears of corn that I gleaned.

As usual, I tallied up the frozen and canned produce from this summer. We used every can and freezer box that we could find in September. This year I did some 60 pint of pickles and the same number of applesauce plus 57 jars of jelly and jam. Our shelves and freezers contain more than 300 quarts of food which is a lot for just two people. However, I have been sharing generous amounts with our children when they come to visit.

Handmade Gifts For Gardeners

• Save on gift wrap, packaging and time during the holiday season by giving IOUs for garden work, indoor plant starts, seeds from heirloom plants, or perennial plant divisions.

• Ask a group of gardeners what they want for Christmas and more than one will answer "a load of manure." Indulge them — contact a farm or stable and arrange to have a load of this valuable soil conditioner delivered to their backyard. You could also share compost from your pile or a municipal pile.

• For friends with fireplaces or those who like to barbecue, tie together a few branches from the annual pruning of aromatic woods, such as cherry, apple, or hickory. Add a bow for a seasonal touch.

• Bouquets garnis for flavoring soups can be mixed up in a jiffy from homegrown or storebought dried herbs. Cookbooks carry a variety of recipes most of which include parsley, thyme, bay, and celery leaves. Place one tablespoon of dried herbs in a 4-inch-square scrap of muslin. Tie closed with colorful string or yarn. Pack several in a dark glass jar, baking powder tin, or other used kitchen container covered with holiday paper. Give as a hostess gift or to your favorite gourmet.

Lancaster Farm Women Hold 76th Convention

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) —It's been 76 years, but the Society of Farm Women of Lancaster County have not stopped spreading happiness. This year, members raised more than $4,700 for Christ's Home, a home for children; $2,223 for the heifer project, which donates a food-producing animal to a needy family who in turns donates the first offspring to a needy family; and $10,500 to local projects.

The county society held its 76th annual convention on November 6, at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster.

At the day-long convention, a recap of the activities of the 29 county societies showed that members gave of themselves by donating time and money for the following: cancer pads, food bank, Meals On Wheels, libraries, Self-Help Warehouse, Lancaster AIDS, Seeing Eye, Springs of Living Water, Teen Challenge, Lung Association, and needy families.

In addition to the county project for Christ Home and the state Heifer project, more than $10,500 was donated to other needs.

Much of the finances raised were earned by holding craft shows, food stands, and auctions.

It was not all work for the members who also enjoyed eating together, learning new hobbies and crafts, and enjoyed poetry recitals and dinner theaters.

"We did our share of laughing,"

(Turn to Page 14)

Deceased members are remembered by, from left, Fay Garman, Society 1; Ruth Schroeder, Society 13; Eileen Bruckhart, Society 5; and Torie Hostetter, Society 5.

York Farm Women Help The Hungry

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Following their song theme to "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," members of the York County Society of Farm Women are again reaching out to brighten the lives of hungry neighbors.

Members of the York County society piled tables high with canned and dry food and non-perishables at the Wisehaven Hall on November 4 as they arrived for their annual convention. Following the daylong session of business, entertainment and fellowship, boxes of food were packed and delivered to the Dover Food Bank, Helping Hands for the Homeless and the Broad Street Family Services.

As a highlight of the county meeting, cash donations of $750 were presented to the York Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Mason-Dixon Food Locker.

Nearly $4,000 was raised during the past year through drawings for two quilts, made by members of the societies, as well as several other hand-crafted afghans, pillows and wall hangings. Winner of the pieced quilt awarded during the convention was Mary Rohler, Mount Wolf.

Outgoing county president Barbara Malehorn carried the quilt theme through the day-long program, including table centerpieces of miniature wooden quilt stands complete with miniature quilts. The friendship quilt she instituted as a county project during her tenure of leadership was supported with a patch from each of the county's 32 individual societies. Profits from that quilt, awarded earlier in the year, will go toward York County's hosting of the state Farm Women's Spring Rally, scheduled for May 11, 1994, at the York Fairgrounds.

Carolyn Neal, Dillsburg, Group 31, moves up to head the county Farm Women as president for the next two years, after serving a term as first vice-president. Shirley Kauffman, Wellsville, Group 17, moves into the first vice-president slot. Continuing as treasurer is Treva Stiles, Glen Rock, a member of Group 18.

Two new offiers were elected during the business meeting to complete the slate of county leadership. Arlene Keener, Airville, Group 29, was elected second vice-president and Trudy Reichard, Seven Valleys, Groups 18 and 28, will handle the secretary responsibilities.

Members of the York Farm Women societies wrap up their annual meeting by packing boxes of non-perishable foodstuffs for the county food bank.

State president Arlene Witman invited all members to attend the annual state Farm Women convention on January 10 in Harrisburg. Cookbook chairman Naomi Bupp, a York County member, noted that more than 16,500 cookbooks have been sold in less than two years, enabling the Farm Women to award five $1,000 scholarships. An index for the popular cookbook is now available for eary editions; later editions have an index included.

said Joyce Slaymaker, who was installed as the new president of the county Farm Women. "By giving ourselves, our generosity touched many lives in many ways."

In addition to Corinne Nissley installing Joyce Slaymaker as president, Kathryn Fry as first vice president, and Allegra Leininger as second vice president, other officers include Elizabeth Robinson, secretary; and Betty Geib, treasurer.

Speakers for the day included Doris Thomas, county home economist, who spoke about the changes seen in the county in the past 30 years and Bev Richards, inspirational speaker from Philadelphia, who challenged women to accept change with confidence by knowing God is in control of circumstances.

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Marci Hamish and Lancaster County Poultry Queen Melissa Stauffer told members about the responsibility of promoting commodity products.

The Neffsville Mennonite Church Bell Choir performed a musical program with bells.

The organization purposes to contribute to the power and influence of the farm home, to contribute to the community activity of farm women, to develop leadership and to promote better living and working condition in homes.

New Gypsy Moth Problem?

Just when we thought we had the gypsy moth problem under control, there is a new strain threatening our trees.

The Asian gypsy moth is of great concern to officials in the United States and Canada. Compared with the European gypsy moth, which is a permanent resident in parts of North America, the Asian variety could spread faster and cause much greater damage if it becomes established.

The adult female European gypsy moth does not fly, but its Asian counterpart does fly and may lay an egg mass up to 25 miles from where she lived as a caterpillar. The Asian gypsy moth could elude the conventional monitoring efforts use for European gypsy moths. In other words, the Asian gypsy moth could simply outrun us. It also eats a wider variety of hardwood and coniferous trees than its European cousin. Hybrids of European and Asian gypsy moths may have the same troublesome traits as the Asian gypsy moth.

Gypsy moths were found in and around Wilmington, North Carolina, in July. The source of the infestation was a cargo ship carrying ammunition from depots and bases in Germany. Asian gypsy moths have apparently spread to Germany and are mixing with their European cousins.

Officials from the USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture discovered that the female moths on the infested ship were flyers like Asian gypsy moths. Samples of the moths were collected so scientists could examine their genes (the only way to tell Asian and European gypsy moths apart). Some of the moths were the European variety, some were the Asian variety, and most were a hybrid of the two.

Germany is experiencing the largest infestation of gypsy moths since World War II, and reports indicate that outbreaks are occurring in other European countries as well. As more military equipment and personnel return to bases in the United States, the chance is greater than unwanted gypsy moths could be introduced into uninfested parts of the United States. The same goes for commercial cargo.

Forest pest specialists from the USDA Forest Service and Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service are working with Russian counterparts in eastern Russian port cities and their environs to set up monitoring programs for the Asian gypsy moth.

In addition to monitoring outbreaks at their source in Russia, scientists are looking into using control measures when necessary and modifying how goods are stored and loaded on ships at port to reduce the risk of loading Asian gypsy moths as well.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service is using an exclusion strategy to prevent ships originating from eastern Russian ports from entering U.S. ports until they can be inspected and certified free of Asian gypsy moths. The Canadian government is also taking action to prevent Asian gypsy moth introductions into Canada.

In 1992 eradication projects were carried out on more than 160,000 acres in Washington, Oregon, and Vancouver British Columbia to wipe out Asian gypsy moths. The moths entered the United States and Canada via ships carrying cargo from eastern Russian ports. Monitoring gypsy moth traps in this area for one year shows that the Asian gypsy moths were completely eliminated.

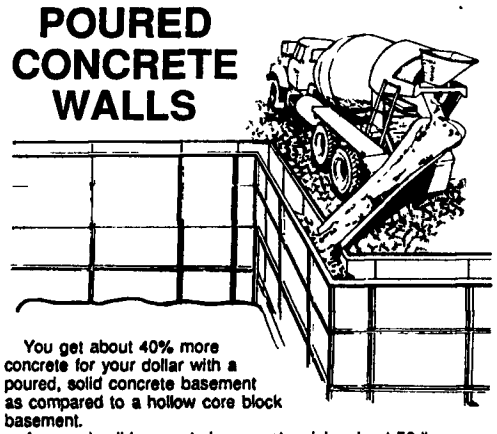
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ... there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

4-H HAPPENINGS

Competitive Trail Ride Winners Announced

UNIVERSITY PARK — 4-H members and leaders from eight counties recently participated in the ninth annual Pennsylvania 4-H Competitive Trail Ride, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The event, also known as the Keystone Ride, took place on September 17 and 18 and covered more than 30 miles through Rothrock State Forest in Centre, Mifflin, and Huntingdon counties.

The 1993 first-place division winners were Beth Ann Bunnell, Columbia County, junior riding pony; Jollene Shearer, York County, senior riding pony; Laura Turnbaugh, Perry County, junior riding horse; Heather Greenly, Columbia County, senior riding horse; Melissa Castriota, York County, adult/leader lightweight; and Gene Barrett, Columbia County, adult/leader heavyweight.

The annual competition is organized by Ben Nolt, coordinator of Penn State's 4-H Therapeutic Horseback Riding Program, and Patricia Comerford, instructor in dairy and animal science. Richard Ely, 4-H leader in Somerset County, served as this year's volunteer leader.

"Competitive trail riding encourages teamwork between the rider and horse," said Nolt. "4-H'ers learn to select a good trail horse and properly condition the animal. They develop riding skills and come to know what to expect of themselves and the horse. The experience also teaches youth how to treat woodlands and take care of champ sites and trails. They develop a greater appreciation for nature."

Participants spend months conditioning themselves and their horses for the event. They must complete the ride within a specified time and are judged on their horsemanship, trail manners and the condition of their horse before, during and after the ride.

This year's event was supported by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources Bureau of Forestry, the Nittany Amateur Radio Club, the Penn State Pre-Vet Club, Centre Equine Practice, the State College Air National Guard Unit, the Patton Township Lions Club, Houser Vending Company of State College, Happy Valley Motor Inn of State College and local volunteers.

The 4-H Competitive Trail Ride is open to all 4-H horse and pony club members in the state. For more information, contact your county's Penn State Cooperative Extension office or contact Ben Nolt, 323 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802; (814) 863-3824.

Make Topiaries For Holiday Giving

NEWARK, Del. — Too early to think about holiday gift-giving?

Not if you plan to grow your gifts. Training a plant over a frame to shape into an ornamental topiary is an inexpensive and easy way to make a gift people will treasure, according to Jo Mercer, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension horticulture agent.

"Simple indoor topiaries are easy to create from semi-woody plants such as rosemary and thyme. Both are very fragrant and adapt well to indoor culture," says Mercer. "Elfin herb is also a good choice because it trains easily and blooms most of the year."

Any of the ivy varieties are also a good choice for shaping topiaries. She suggests buying a plant that is growing in a pot only slightly smaller than the container you plan to use. Choose a healthy-looking, not-too-full specimen that is already starting to vine.

"For your topiary, use a clay or stoneware pot," the agent advises. "The frame structure has a high center of gravity, making lightweight plastic pots a poor choice — they will tip over. A good proportion ratio for frame height to pot height is one to one. Keep the widths equal."

The frame should be medium-weight wire, about the gauge of a coat hanger. In fact, a coat hanger is about the right size for the proportions of a 6-inch pot. The straightened hook can be inserted into the soil near the trunk of the plant. The remainder of the coat hanger is then bent into the desired shape — a simple circle, a heart or a diamond shape that suggests an evergreen tree.

"You don't want to crush or abrade the tender stems of the plant," Mercer says. "So use soft cotton twine or yarn to gently tie the branches onto the frame. Snip off stray side branches only and let the tips grow to reach around the entire wire frame."

She recommends checking the ties frequently to prevent girdling. Remove ties that are too tight. Gradually, the plant will become self-supporting and ties can be removed altogether.

After the entire length of the frame has been covered, snip off the tips to encourage side shoots to grow. This will add the fullness that camouflages the structure.

"Once your topiary takes shape, it can be dressed up for the season," Mercer suggests. "A circular topiary lends itself well to becoming a wreath. Just add miniature lights powered by batteries and a bright red or plaid bow to complete the traditional holiday symbol."

Trees Need Fertilizer

Like other plants, trees must have essential mineral elements to grow well and remain healthy.

Since trees thrive in natural areas for decades, it's often hard to understand the need to fertilize them in human-made landscapes. The reason is simply that soil and environmental conditions are changed when trees are transplanted to home grounds, making periodic fertilizing necessary.

If a tree is growing in fertile, loamy soil, it will have less need for added fertilizer. Most trees are not planted in optimum soil conditions however. The following recommendations apply to trees in the home landscape.

First, get the soil tested to determine exact fertilizer needs of the areas where trees are to be planted. Soil test kits can be purchased in the extension office. The cost is $6 per kit. Office hours are 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The results of the test will include fertilizer recommendations.

Any complete fertilizer is good for trees. The ratio of nitrogen-phosphorus- potassium should be 1- 1- 1, 1- 2- 2, or 1- 2- 1. Recommended fertilizers include 10- 10- 10, 5- 10- 10 or 5- 10- 5. You can substitute such fertilizer types as 20- 20- 20, 10- 20- 20, or 10- 20- 10. However, remember to apply just half as much because these contain twice as much fertilizer.

The best time to apply fertilizer every year, or at least every other year, is late September through November. The next best time is in early spring before buds break. Avoid July through mid-September applications because new growth, forced out at this time, will not harden before the onset of winter. As a result, the new growth will die.

Ideally, you should apply fertilizer just before a gentle rain. This will help the material dissolve and move into the soil. When a dry spell persists, irrigate the fertilized area with 1/2 to 1 inch of water.

The simplest and fastest way to apply fertilizer is called broadcasting - or surface fertilizer application. This method requires little labor and no special equipment. You amply spread fertilizer evenly over the soil surface under tree branches and at least 5 to 10 feet beyond the drip line. Trees that are planted in regularly fertilized lawns probably will not require more fertilizer applications.

The second fertilization method is called the hole or punch-bar method. With this method, you use a punch-bar or similar device to make holes six to twelve inches deep. Make holes five to ten feet beyond the drip line of the tree. This method is advantageous if the soil is compacted or contains a lot of clay. The holes, which contain fertilizer, aerate the soil and provide nutrients to the trees.

With the hole method, you should spread evenly the recommended fertilizer rate in the holes using a funnel and a small cup as a measuring device. After placing fertilizer in each hole, finish filling the hole with sand, crushed stone, perlite, peat moss or loam soil.

Cracks In Trees?

Large cracks that develop in trees are often blamed on one of two causes - the freezing and thawing of the trunk during the winter, or the effect of direct sunlight on the trunk during any part of the year. Traditionally, cracks have been thought to develop on the outside of the trunk and move inward. However, Arbortopics (2371 S. Foster Avenue, Wheeling, IL 60090) reports that research on tree growth and function suggests this may not be true.

Studies by Dr. Alex Shigo, a respected plant pathologist who has done endless research on the internal functions and care of trees, indicate that cracks begin to form inside the tree and move toward the surface. Cracks may originate from wounds, improper pruning cuts, root injury, branch stubs, or weak crotches. The important point to realize is that the crack originates inside the tree — completely out of view from the outside.

Freeze/thaw cycles, drought, wind, and heat all can cause swelling and contraction of tree stems. These actions may serve to force the internal cracks toward the surface. The environmental conditions did not create the crack; they stimulated an existing crack to move to the surface.

Crack formation can be prevented with proper tree care. Eliminating weak crotches, proper pruning cuts, and wound prevention are the keys. Tree wraps and pruning paints do little, if anything, to prevent cracks. Cracks can form beneath tree wrap as if it wasn't there. A growing number of researchers and nurserymen are recommending not using tree wraps. As we learn more about trees, old ideas continue to give way to new procedures.

MODEL 90 FARROWING CRATE

Constructed from heavy gauge materials, this crate is designed to reduce crushing with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars make for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminate the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

Spencer Walk, left, showed the grand champion steer at the club's roundup in October. Crystal Meyers showed the reserve champion and was named champion showman. Justin Conner received the champion fitting plaque.

Extension agent Bill Reagan, left, presents retiring club leader from Leon Lebo with a plaque of appreciation from the membership.

Franklin Co. Correspondent

KAUFFMAN STATION (Franklin Co.) — "Our 4-H club is a family," graduating Beef Club member Daren Statler said in his farewell remarks at the Franklin County 4-H Baby Beef Awards Banquet.

Statler, a preveterinary student at Messiah College, was a member of the club for 11 years. He is the son of Dennis and Karen Statler of Greencastle.

Statler said that he didn't know how many friends he had until his steer misbehaved at one of the shows, throwing him to the ground. He left the ring, embarrassed and disappointed. "For an hour afterward, people kept coming over to me and asking if I was OK," he said.

Also graduating from the club is Karen Eshelman, the daughter of Dorothy and Carl Eshelman, Greencastle. She was a member for eight years, and served as the club's treasurer.

Retiring club leader Leon Lebo continued the theme of family in his speech at the November 6 event, held at the Kauffman Community Center.

Lebo said that one of the club's best rules is the one permitting parents to help fit the steers. "It means a lot to me to see families working together."

"Each of you has a contribution to make to the club," he continued. "You get along with each other. It's competitive at times, but you share in each others' successes and failures. I challenge each of you to stay in the club and be involved with a good, clean group of youth."

Lebo, who had been leader for ten years, received a standing ovation from the 130 members, buyers, sponsors and guests present.

Club president Spencer Walk presented Lebo with a model truck from the membership. Walk cited the "dedication and love this man has for young people" in presenting the award.

Special awards went to Dr. Alan Oliver of the Greencastle Veterinary Hospital for TB testing the steers free of charge, and to Judy Lebo for her assistance to the club during the years her husband was leader.

Lebo expressed appreciation to the sponsors of the club and the buyers of the steers, saying that without them, there would be no 4-H Baby Beef Club. He noted that a first-year member, Cassie Lowams, wrote in her project book, "I owe great thanks to E.L.M. Garage for buying Rusty from me. This makes it possible for me to be in 4-H again next year.

Project leader Duane Hawbaker gave out the club's yearly awards.

Super Spreader

Double Rotating, Heavy Duty Expellors

Meyer Mfg. Corp. has developed a new style of manure spreader that can handle a wide variety of manure. The double expellor system rips away tough pen or frozen manure and applies it to the field in a smooth, even pattern. The new Meyer unit unloads out the rear, not the side, to prevent debri from coming back to the spreader and tractor. The Super Spreader is available in 260 bu., 325 bu., 360 bu., 390 bu., 450 bu., and 540 bu. units.

Lower Loading Height
Faster Unloading Time
Trouble-Free Design
50% Thicker Tank Steel
Free Demo

Two Large 20" Augers Help Prevent Bridging Problems

Our tank sides are almost straight up & down, not V shaped like other units. The augers are made of tough 3/8" sectional steel flighting. Our auger design cleans the bottom of the tank completely — no frozen manure buildup like beater type spreaders have.

'94 PA FARM SHOW COLLECTOR MODELS

For the fourth consecutive year, limited edition collector models will be offered at the state farm show. The 78th show runs Saturday, Jan. 8th through Thursday, Jan. 13th. All models are approved by the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission and are licensed by the Department of Agriculture.

For Ertl bank collectors, a 1923 Chevrolet ½ ton delivery wagon is available. 1248 will be made. Banks cannot be reserved, but will be sold in limited quantities daily with most going on sale on Saturday and Sunday. Price will be $18 each with tax.

For farm toy collectors, a 1/25th scale model of a FRICK steam traction engine has been approved. The cast metal models are individually serial numbered, include a dated farm show keystone emblem and are gift boxed. When the model is moved, a small belt drives the belt pulley, piston rod, and slider valve rod. They will sell for $56.60 plus tax.

Winross collector trucks will also be available and this year's model is designed to honor the state's dairy industry. It features the newly designed tanker that looks like a real farm pickup tanker. Both Ford and Kenworth cabs are available and design assistance was provided by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion employees. The photo shows preliminary models, additional graphics will be added to the cabs and the tankers. They will sell for $42.45 plus tax.

RESERVATION PRIVILEGES, AVOID POSSIBLE LONG LINES

For reservation instructions, send a Self Addressed Envelope to: 94 FARM SHOW MODELS, PO Box 553, Gap, Pa. 17527. Write promptly so you don't miss reservation deadlines.

Walk Shows Grand Champion

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — For the second year, Franklin County 4-H Beef Club member Spencer Walk of Chambersburg, determination and hard work paid dividends as his 1,270 pound Angus-Chianina crossbred steer became grand champion under the watchful eye of Dr. John Comerford.

Comerford praised the steer for his wide loins, smooth finish, and thick quarters at the annual beef show. Spencer also placed first in fitting and showing in the senior division. The grand champion was purchased that evening at the 4-H Beef Sale by Hoss's Steak and Sea House for $3.10 a pound.

Crystal Meyers of Greencastle won the reserve grand champion honors with her 1,240-pound crossbred steer, which was purchased by Chambersburg Farm Service for $2.25 a pound. Crystal also won the champion fitting honors.

Lightweight champion honors went to Brad Rife of Greencastle with his 1,160-pound Limousin steer, which was purchased by McDowell Insurance for $1.04 a pound.

Tim Mackey of Waynesboro won the medium heavyweight division with a 1,205-pound crossbred steer, which sold for 87 cents a pound to the Butcher Shoppe.

Jordon Connor of Chambersburg took home three blue ribbons as he won the heavyweight division with a 1,340-pound crossbred steer, which was purchased by Four Seasons Crop Care for 96 cents a pound. Jordon placed first in the fitting and showing competition in the novice age group. His brother, Justin, won the same honors in the intermediate division and was selected champion fitter overall.

First year member Ariane Rife won first in fitting in the junior group.

Cutting Firewood Can Benefit The Forest

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Chilly winter weather is just around the corner and Pennsylvanians with fireplaces and woodburning stoves are heading into forests and woodlots to cut firewood. If you're among them, be sure to develop a plan before you start up your chainsaw, warns an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"If done properly, cutting firewood serves a dual purpose," said Dr. James Finley, instructor in the college's School of Forest Resources. "Using wood for fuel also gives us the opportunity to improve woodlots that have been mismanaged, overcut or neglected.

"Past cutting practices left many woodlands with an overabundance of crooked, diseased and otherwise unsalable trees that hamper the growth of straight, healthy trees needed for lumber and veneer. Removing less desirable trees helps the best trees on the woodlot to grow."

Before cutting firewood in your stand, you should know the value of the trees you are thinning. "As a rule, sugar maple, ash and cherry are more valuable than red maple, beech or aspen," Finley said. "And oaks are more valuable than hickories."

Your choice of trees to cut for firewood also affects the wildlife in your woodlot. "Dead trees, whether standing or fallen, are particularly important for wildlife," said Finley. "Some people think that leaving dead trees in the forest to rot is a waste of resources, but dead trees offer both shelter and food to many wildlife species. The existence of numerous species depends on the presence of dead trees."

A fallen tree soon is infested with fungi and insects, which decompose the tree and return nutrients to the soil. Insects, salamanders, snakes, mice and shrews seek refuge in rotting logs. Skunks, bears and woodpeckers frequent these "cafeterias" for easy pickings.

Ruffed grouse, rufous-sided towhees and other species nest under partially elevated logs. Hollow logs shelter a variety of forest mammals such as shrews, chipmunks and bears. Foxes and coyotes also may use logs for dens. Cavities in live or dead trees are used by 35 species of birds and 20 species of mammals in Pennsylvania.

"Using dead wood for wildlife rather than firewood requires making a choice," Finley said. "The value of the wood for fuel must be weighed against the possible value of the wildlife a dead log can attract. For instance, a hollow oak that serves as a den for a raccoon family could be cut up for fuel. But it may take decades to 'grow' another hollow tree for these raccoons. Is the firewood worth the cost of not seeing a raccoon family using your woodlot?"

When cutting firewood, it's vital to be aware of how your choices will affect the forest. "If it's done right, firewood can be cut without disturbing the natural environment," Finley said.

"But unplanned cuttings can devastate your woodlot. Make a plan before you start felling trees." Service and extension foresters can answer your questions and help you devise a cutting plan, Finley said.

More information about cutting firewood to benefit the forest is available from your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Ag Commissioner Visits Grange Session

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — New York farmers should remain concerned about an historic problem — getting a good price for their product — but at the same time they should be excited about the kinds of opportunities that technological advances will soon bring, said Richard McGuire, New York state commissioner of agriculture and markets.

McGuire, speaking to Grangers gathered here for the organization's 121st annual session, outlined some of those technological possibilities.

"New doors of opportunity for growing food are going to open in the Northeast thanks to plant genetics and the like," said McGuire, who spoke of pesticide-free "under glass" production that can mean moving production away from traditional locations to anywhere land is available. "A controlled growing environment means crops like red peppers, for instance, can be grown anywhere — including the Northeast. Agricultural research is going on all around the world, and it has the potential to change the profile of agriculture in New York."

McGuire said leaders continue to look at ways to provide a better pricing structure for state dairy farmers, whose production costs often exceed profit. He was critical, too, of an environmental movement that can have a negative impact on agriculture. "It doesn't do any good to preserve farmland, or to be politically correct, if we starve at the same time," he said. "We need to educate consumers and improve their attitude about agriculture. It's vital."

Christmas Market Set

CHELTENHAM, Md. — The Southern Maryland Regional Farmers Market, located on U.S. Rt. 301, south in Cheltenham, is planning its third annual Farmers Christmas Market.

On Saturday, November 27, the inside of the state warehouse will open for a Christmas market. The market will operate every Saturday until Christmas from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Farmers and crafters are needed to sell poinsettias, wreathes, crafts, dried flowers, winter fruits and vegetables, honey, jams and jellies, baked goods, hams, nuts, etc. The goal is to fill the warehouse with quality homemade products. Christmas trees are the only item limited to one Maryland Christmas tree grower. The fee to sell at the market is $20 per day.

Anyone interested in participating should contact Regina Prunty, market manager, at (800) 533-FARM (3276) or (301) 372-1066, as soon as possible. Because of the popularity of this event, space may be limited.

PORCINE STRESS SYNDROME

The PSS/PSE can of worms has been open since the 1960s, when our industry began turning the production crank for meat-type hogs.

This admirable response to consumer needs, unfortunately, turned out to be a nightmare — sudden death in the pig, and pale, soft, and exudative (PSE) pork. So we discovered, the hard way, that we couldn't have our cake and eat it too.

Our next major discovery was that the problem is not all genetic. Environmental influences, such as feeding, handling, and weather, play an important role as well.

And now, another breakthrough has been unleashed, this one so prevailing that the final solution to the PSS problem is within reach. This tool, the DNA blood test, does nothing more than identify stress positive pigs and stress carriers.

But with that knowledge, we're finally in a position to control our own destiny. If it were only that simple. A part of the industry sees the test as a means to eliminate the gene. Others are using to test to keep the gene for its lean-meat benefits, with the hope that careful control of breedings will minimize the PSE problem.

Incidence

An extensive survey of pork quality was sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) during the summer of 1991. Led by Bob Kauffman at the University of Wisconsin, a team of four scientists evaluated more than 10,000 hams for quality characteristics. Sixteen percent of the hams were PSE.

What Happens In The Pig

Pigs known to be stress positive are, in genetic terms, homozygous recessive (nn) for the stress gene. Because of their unusual metabolism, stress (castration, loading, hauling, mating) can trigger a five-fold increase in calcium concentrations in the muscle cell.

The high level of calcium then activates a prolonged muscle contraction, which rapidly uses glycogen, a type of carbohyrate stored in the muscle.

Because of the prolonged contraction, oxygen can't get to the muscle fast enough, so the glycogen is metabolized anaerobically (without oxygen). Two by-products of the event are heat and lactic acid. The heat quickly raises the body temperature, while the lactic acid is involved in the pale, soft character of pork from PSS pigs.

About 80 percent of stress positive pigs will have PSE pork. Related to this scenario is strong evidence that PSS hogs have more or larger "alpha-white" muscle fibers than normal hogs. The alpha-white fiber, which becomes predominant after genetic selection for heavily muscled hogs, has the biochemical machinery for rapid break-down of glycogen.

What you see in the pig is a rapid increase in body temperature — often as much as 10 degrees in a matter of minutes. Red and purple blotches on the skin often accompany this rise in temperature. The lactic acid increases the acidity of the blood (blood pH drops) and leads to an increase in respiration rate — an automatic mechanism used by all animals for correcting low blood pH. This is one reason pigs suffering from PSS will breath very rapidly.

Normal animals (NN) may also have PSE meat under some conditions, but the incidence is apparently very low (less than 3 percent). Carrier animals (Nn) evidently show no signs of PSS during stress, but they often have PSE qualities in the pork.

Research at Lacombe and Denmark suggests the carriers produce 60 percent PSE pork. Dr. Austin Murray, meat biochemist for Agriculture Canada, estimates a lower incidence, around 30 percent, of PSE pork in carrier pigs. But the point is, even though the carrier pig may not show outward signs of PSS, the pork quality will be less than ideal.

This is further evidenced, by a study at the University of Minnesota:

Table 1: Effect of PSS Gene on Carcass Composition and Quality

| | Normal | Carrier | Positive |
|---|---|---|---|
| Backfat, in | 1.50 | 1.41 | 1.37 |
| Loin eye area, sq in | 3.91 | 4.68 | 4.85 |
| Color | 3.00 | 2.33 | 2.00 |
| Firmness | 2.83 | 1.67 | 1.00 |
| Marbling | 2.17 | 1.33 | 1.00 |

Adapted from Shurson (1992). Color: 1=pale, pinkish gray; 5=dark purplish red. Firmness: 1=very soft; 5=very firm. Marbling: 1=devoid; 5=moderately abundant.

Although the pigs in this study are a bit fat, two points are evident. First, pigs positive for the PSS gene are leaner and have more muscle. Second, they have muscle that is paler, softer and without marbling.

PSE Effects On Pork Processing

Because of the rapid drop in pH, PSE muscles lose their ability to retain juices. Muscles take on a mushy, pale appearance. The problem is most apparent in the loin and outer ham muscles, and often leads to a two-toned color in the ham cuts.

Fresh cuts lose more water and nutrients, are less attractive to consumers, and have a shorter shelf life. Processed products shrink excessively (about 3 percent above normal). Frozen cuts lose more moisture during thawing. Obviously PSS can be a problem for producers. But PSE, a direct result of the stress syndrome, is a problem for both packers and consumers.

Causes Of PSS And PSE

There is little question that

Pork Prose

genetics play an important role in the incidence of PSS. Selecting lean, heavily muscled breeding replacements can lead to a predominance of the alpha-white muscle fiber.

If that happens, PSS and PSE may follow. There is also evidence that environment is a factor — especially in the incidence of PSE. The time of feeding relative to the time of slaughter is important, since feeding time will determine the amount of glycogen in the muscles.

Loading, unloading, and handling of pigs just prior to slaughter also affect PSE. Temperature and humidity during the transit and holding process is critical — with most PSE problems occurring during the summer.

Detection Of PSS In The Live Pig

Halothane Test

Halothane is a gas used to anesthetize pigs during surgery. Besides putting the pig to sleep, it also has the property of making the PSS pig show signs of muscle rigidity within 3 to 5 minutes of receiving the gas.

Disadvantages of the test include the need for special equipment and expertise, danger of killing the stress susceptible pig, the narrow window of time in which the test can be used (between 7 and 11 weeks of age), and the fact that carriers of the halothane response gene will test negative.

Blood Test

A new test is now available, often referred to as the DNA blood test. (DNA is the molecule in the chromosome which carries the genetic code that makes each animal unique). Two years ago researchers discovered a mutation in the DNA of PSS pigs which leads to the calcium abnormalities discussed above. This led to the development of the molecular genetic test, which detects both positive pigs and carriers.

Detecting PSE In The Carcass

After a hog carcass has had a chance to cool in a typical packing plant, it is moved to a cutting room. At that point, it's easy to identify the PSE condition — you can see the pale color, and the juices exuding from the muscle. The challenge is to identify the problem 45 minutes after slaughter, or just before the carcass enters the cooler. This would allow the packer to sort the carcasses, and perhaps correct problems in preslaughter handling.

The information would also be useful to the producer in his breeding programs. One concept that shows promise in detecting PSE at slaughter is pH. All muscle drops in pH after slaughter. However, muscle from a PSE hog drops much faster than normal, according to research at Iowa State University and the University of Guelph. At 45 minutes post slaughter the pH will be lower in a PSE hog compared to a normal one (about 5.7 vs 6.4, respectively). Unfortunately, we don't yet have all the bugs worked out to measure pH at normal line speeds in large packing plants.

Reducing The Problem

For pigs with PSS, there is no practical treatment, other than eliminating the stress. Unfortunately, minor things like mating or moving a pig down an alley are enough to trigger a PSS "attack."

For carcasses with PSE, there are few processes than can effectively utilize the watery pork.

Blood Test Breeding Stock

As the industry intensifies its selection for meat type hogs to take advantage of new grading systems, we are fortunate to have a test which can help us avoid the PSS problems encountered in the 1970s.

Serious seedstock producers, especially those that have experienced PSS or PSE problems in their breeding stock, are well advised to test at least the boars in the herd. This will provide important information in the overall breeding program and limit the possibility of marketing carrier animals to commercial herds.

The commercial test is currently available at the University of Minnesota through the laboratory of Dr. Charles Louis (612) 624-4202. Cost per sample is about $50.

Take Pigs Off The Feeder

Fasting hogs eight to 12 hours prior to slaughter will reduce the amount of glycogen in the muscles and help to eliminate the rapid drop in pH.

Keep Pigs Cool During Hot Weather

Bedding the truck with wet sand or shavings when temperatures exceed 60 degrees will help, said Temple Grandin. If the temperature is more than 80 degrees, spray hogs with a light mist prior to loading.

Practices At The Packing Plant

A 3 to 6 hour rest period between unloading and stunning reduced PSE by 20 to 40 percent in studies at the University of Guelph. Cooling the hogs rapidly after slaughter will help to reduce the problems associated with a rapid drop in muscle pH.

Economic Penalty

I have historically not recommended a penalty, because the problem is both environmental and genetic. But we now have important new technology for accurately identifying both positive and carrier pigs. Theoretically that could be the tool for eliminating the gene. Since many individuals and breeding companies are choosing to keep the gene, the PSE problems are probably here to stay.

PSE is bad news for both the packer and consumer, so perhaps the time is ripe for an economic penalty. All that is needed is an objective means for identifying PSE carcasses 45 minutes after slaughter.

Producers that choose to sell carriers of the stress gene, or purchase breeding stock from companies using the stress gene, will pay the consequences. And rightfully so.

1. Despite marked reductions,

Phillips Promoted At Keystone Farm Credit

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Gerald Phillips has been promoted to senior loan officer. The promotion was announced by Lancaster Branch Manager Bruce Miller.

Phillips was raised in southern Lancaster County on his parents' dairy and tobacco farm and was graduated from Solanco High School in Quarryville. He earned a degree in dairy science from Delaware Valley College in 1972 and studied agricultural education on the graduate level at Penn State.

His diversified career includes teaching Vo-Ag at both Pequea Valley High School and Lampeter-Strasburg High School, herdsman at Fulton Way Farms, and crops/feed sales with Agway, Inc. Phillips joined Farm Credit in July 1978. His territory is northeastern Lancaster County.

Gerald Phillips

Phillips received the FFA Honorary Keystone Degree earlier this year. A member of the Vo-Ag Advisory Committee for the Lampeter-Strasburg High School, Phillips is vice president of the Southeast Regional Board of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives, which is responsible for cooperative educational programs in southeastern Pennsylvania. He also serves as secretary-treasurer of the Lancaster County Co-op Council.

Soybean Special Combines Planter, Grain Drill Advantage

RACINE, Wis. — The Case International 5400 Soybean Special from J I Case provides many of the advantages of a planter for a price that's competitive with grain drills.

According to Kurt Schenck, Case product manager-implements, the 5400 prepares the ground for seed much like Case International planters do, but uses a grain-drill feed cup metering system.

"We developed this unit partly in response to customer demands for accommodating narrower rows for interplanting," said Schenck. The Soybean Special accommodates 15-inch row spacing.

Two 15-foot configurations with staggered row units are available - one 10-row and one 11-row, with 15-inch row spacing. Two 20-foot configurations with staggered row units are also available - one 14- and one 15-row, with 15-inch row spacing. The 11- and 15-row units solid seed 15-inch rows and have no skip-rows. The 10- and 14-row units also seed 15-inch rows but have two 26-inch skip-rows to accommodate later cultivation or chemical application.

"Another consideration in the development of the 5400 was the need for equipment that can handle high-residue conditions," Schenck said. "The unique staggered arrangement of the row units provides more clearance for surface residue to pass through the unit, which reduces plugging in heavy crop mat. For the farmer, this means no extra coulters to install for planting in reduced- or no-till conditions."

The Case International 5400 Soybean Special offers the economy of a grain drill while providing excellent soil preparation, using the field-proven row unit technology available in Case International Early Riser® planters.

Schenck pointed out that the Soybean Special features staggered double-disk openers, front pull equalizing depth gauge wheels, and a special furrow firming point that provides a well-defined V furrow bottom. This combination provides more uniform depth control and better seed placement, especially in rough ground. "The end result with the Early Riser system is that you get excellent seed-to-soil contact for optimum germination," he said.

He noted that the Soybean Special has angled metal feed cups for metering. "These are precision molded of oxide-coated, oil-impregnated, sintered steel and won't warp or wear like the plastic cups found on competing equipment," he said.

To accommodate high-density seeding, the 5400 also features a larger seed hopper than planters. "This is important, especially with farmers getting 150,000 to 200,000 beans per acre, depending on row spacing," said Schenck.

Custom Farm Seed Introduces Corn Hybrids

MOMENCE, Ill. — Custom Farm Seed has introduced eight new waxy corn hybrids, four new dent corn hybrids, and five new soybean varieties for the 1994 growing season.

To achieve maximum yields, Custom Farm Seed encourages producers to properly select seed by matching the growing conditions of individual fields to the performance characteristics of its full line of 31 waxy corn hybrids, 31 dent corn hybrids, 16 soybean varieties, and break-thru® alfalfa.

In addition, producers can use its free variety nutrient consulting (VNC) program to make seed choices. The VNC program assists in properly selecting seed for growing conditions and offers recommendations for plant population; expected responses to side dressing; optimum OM%, phosphorous and potassium levels; use of herbicides; and preferred tillage practices.

Truck Pays Dairy Tribute

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the fourth consecutive year, collector models are being offered to help commemorate the Pennsylvania State Farm Show. For 1994, the collector truck model made by the Winross Corporation of Rochester, N.Y. will pay tribute to Pennsylvania's dairy industry.

The tractor trailer model is built with more than 100 parts and features the new design of the tanker back end that makes it look like a real milk pickup truck.

Collectors can select either a Ford or a Kenworth cab. Both are the "long nose" or conventional type. Models will be gift-boxed and a fact sheet on Pennsylvania's dairy industry will be included.

The logo on the side of the tanker and other design suggestions were provided by workers at the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion office in Harrisburg. Models are approved by the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission.

A special "Exhibitor Edition" version of the truck will be offered and it will feature a gold colored tanker (rather than silver), plus has "Exhibitor Edition" silk screened on the cab. About 500 of these models will be made and distribution will be limited.

Exhibitors for the Farm Show in departments that require preentry by Nov. 4 will be receiving a special mailing in late November offering them reservation privileges for the Exhibitor Edition truck model.

About 1,500 or the regular edition trucks will be made. Final quantity depends mostly on how many are reserved. Reserved models must be picked up during the Farm Show at Harrisburg. Each day some 50 to 150 unreserved trucks will be offered for sale at the show. However, the most assured way to get one is to reserve in advance.

To get a reservation form for the Winross dairy tanker commemorating the state's 78th Farm Show as well as the state's dairy industry, send a self-addressed envelope to Pa. Farm Show Truck, P.O. Box 553, Gap, PA. 17527.

This 12-row vertical-fold Case International 950 Series planter folds to a transport width of 20 feet 6 inches. Like the front-fold planter, it is fertilizer compatible and features field-proven Case IH Cyclo Air seed system, convenient central hopper, and Early Riser row-unit technology.

Planter Models Fold Easily

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case offers the 950 Series trailing Cyclo Air® Early Riser® front- and vertical-fold planters.

According to Kurt Schenck, Case product manager-implements, the 950 Series 16-row front- and 12-row vertical-fold planter models can be folded and unfolded quickly and easily from the tractor seat.

On the 16-row front-fold planter, folding is completed by raising the toolbar to transport height and folding the wings simultaneously until they are parallel with the telescoping tongue. Transport width is 15 feet 8 inches. On the 12-row vertical-fold planter, folding is accomplished by raising the wings one at a time. Transport width is 20 feet 6 inches.

On both planters, the seed modules are free-standing units rather than part of the toolbar. This increases durability by minimizing stress factors that can affect the rotation of the seed drum. According to Schenck, the increased structural strength adds to the reliability of the unit and provides more uniform in-row spacing.

Both planters are also available with a heavy-duty, single-disk, parallel-linkage fertilizer opener, capable of operating in no-till conditions. This can be used for liquid or dry fertilizer applications.

Pork Prose

Porcine Stress Syndrome (PSS), since the mid-1960s, is still prevalent. As producers select lean, heavily muscled breeding stock to take advantage of new carcass grading premiums, PSS problems may increase in the near future.

2. PSS in the worst form can lead to sudden death in hogs during time of loading or mating. If PSS pigs survive the loading and transport process, the carcasses are often pale, soft, and exudative. That creates problems for both the packer and the consumer.

3. Environment plays an important role. Fasting pigs before slaughter, keeping pigs cool during transit, resting pigs for several hours after unloading, and a rapid chill time all help to reduce PSE problems.

4. A new DNA blood test can now distinguish between stress positive and stress carrier pigs. Some seedstock producers will use this test to eliminate the stress gene from their herds. Others will employ it to locate the gene and use it to their advantage, with the hope that quality will not be sacrificed. Time will tell.

Grange Recognizes Youth

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange Youth Department last week recognized its members' accomplishments during the past year during the 121st Pennsylvania State Grange session held in Clarion.

Nettie Kauffman, Youth Department director, announced winners in three categories.

The C.H.A.N.C.E. award stands for Caring Has A Noble Continuing Effect. The award is given to those members who have been suggested for membership on the National Grange Youth team. One single male and female and one married couple are selected at the national level.

The award also asks the member to list their community affairs and projects, describe their school activities or profession and Grange activities.

The Spirit of Grange award is a program that selects Grangers who have excelled in their lives and met their personal goals in and out of the Grange.

The subordinate (local) Grange and Pomona (county) Grange Chairpersons of the Year are awards that are for five members who have achieved activities, program and projects within their local Granges.

The winners are:

C.H.A.N.C.E. Award: Wendy Steffy - Alleghenville Grange #2065, Berks County.

Spirit of Grange Award: Mary McMillan, Westfield Grange #1514, Lawrence County; Wendy Steffy, Berks County; Mary Ann Keith, Lincoln Grange #914, Huntingdon County.

Pomona chairperson of the year: Heather Schlegel, Berks County Pomona #43.

Subordinate chairperson of the year: Over 200 members: Faye Schaeffer, Virginville Grange #1832, Berks County; 101-200 members: Tim Schaeffer, Pioneer Grange #1777, Berks County; Under 100 members: Wendy Steffy, Berks County.

Front-Folding Boom Available For Deere Sprayer

MOLINE, Ill. — The performance and convenience of a 60-foot, self-leveling front-folding boom is available as an option for the John Deere 6500 self-propelled sprayer.

The boom features complete hydraulic folding and unfolding from the cab, slip-clutch-protected, "break away" end sections, adjustable tension on the self-leveling suspension, polypropylene tubing, and Snap-Fit nozzle bodies with eight-psi check valves.

The 6500 sprayer can also be equipped with the standard 47-foot or optional 60-foot rear-folding boom.

The new boom's double-folding design increases productivity and convenience when turning on narrow turn rows or maneuvering close to tree lines, fences, utility poles, and other obstacles. Each boom section is controlled independently by an electric switch on the hydrostatic-drive control handle. If either end of the boom accidentally contacts an obstacle, the slip clutch on the 8-foot end section permits the section to "break away," so damage to the boom is prevented or minimized.

The 60-foot, front-folding, self-leveling boom is available as an option for the John Deere 6500 self-propelled sprayer. The boom features in-cab hydraulic control of the folding and unfolding functions, and adjustable tension on the self-leveling suspension system to match varying field conditions.

The trapezoidal-type self-leveling system helps keep the boom level for consistent spray coverage. To match varying field conditions, the suspension system is adjustable. The operator can raise or lower the left and right boom wings on-the-go, hydraulically, to fine tune boom-tip height. To handle a wide variety of spraying requirements, boom-height adjustment ranges from 24 to 96 inches.

Three-quarter-inch polypropylene tubing and Snap-Fit nozzle bodies with eight-psi check valves distribute solution along the boom. Nozzles are set on 20-inch spacing at the factory and are recessed behind the boom frames for protection. A field-installed tubing kit permits customizing nozzle spacing to meet specific row requirements. Nozzle drops are available as a field-installed option. They can be positioned virtually anywhere the operator desires.

Long-wearing, Syntal plastic, white (number 3) Color-Tips™ spray nozzles and 50-mesh nozzle-tip strainers are standard equipment. Syntal tips normally provide longer life than stainless steel tips and cost less. The Syntal tips are color coded for easy size identification. Number 40- and 80-mesh boom strainers are also available.

A new, retractable ladder on the 6500 self-propelled sprayer complements the new boom with easier access to the cab and improved crop clearance. A switch mounted on the steering column enables the operator to raise or lower the ladder in 10 seconds or less. A ground-level switch permits retracting the ladder for storage, or for increased accessibility to the engine compartment. A convenient handrail prevents the operator from attempting to exit from the machine with the ladder retracted.

Air Disk Drill Tills, Seeds In One Pass

MOLINE, Ill. — The John Deere 730 air disk drill combines residue handling performance of a five-bar field cultivator with the accurate seed placement of double-disk openers, for one-pass tilling and seeding in minimum-till conditions.

When teamed with the speed and capacity of the John Deere 787 air seeding system, the 730 air disk drill's 28-, 36-, and 44-foot working widths provide productive and efficient seeding of small grains and soybeans.

The 730 uses the first four bars of the John Deere 980 field cultivator frame as the mounting points for new 5/8 x 1-3/4-inch standards with 135 pounds of trip force. The 24-inch underframe clearance and 123-inch fore-aft clearance promote residue flow through the machine. The 9-inch spacing of the standards and a choice of 10-inch sweeps or 11-inch Tru-Width™ sweeps provide thorough tillage and complete undercutting of weeds.

Depending on site requirements, the 730 can be equipped with either a double row of harrow tines to level the seedbed or one rank of harrow tines and a rolling basket to break clods and firm the soil behind the sweeps.

The fifth bar of the 730 is the mounting point for the double disk opener rockshaft. The 1/4-inch-offset double-disk openers are set on either 6-inch or 7-1/2-inch row spacing. The openers are positioned in a long/short stagger for increased residue flow. Exclusive depth-gauging press wheels are closely coupled for consistent seed depth, and they provide depth settings from 0 to 3-1/2 inches in 1/4-inch increments. Changing depth settings is fast and convenient, and does not require tools.

The John Deere 730 air disk drill tills and seeds in one pass. Available in 28-, 36-, and 44-foot models, the machine features a five-rank design with four ranks for tillage and the fifth rank for mounting the double-disk opener rockshaft.

An active, hydraulic down-pressure system provides consistent opener penetration over uneven terrain by maintaining a uniform pressure on the openers. Down-pressure for all the openers is set with a convenient knob and pressure gauge from a single location.

Single-point hydraulic depth control sets the operating depth for the tillage components.

Tandem Walk-Over™ wheels smooth out bumps and help maintain a consistent tillage depth. A castering stabilizer wheel on each wing features a ratchet to make leveling quick and easy.

The wings fold 110 degrees over center for fold-and-go convenience and a narrow transport width of 19 feet for the 44-foot model and 16 feet for the two smaller sizes. Transport height ranges from 11 feet 3 inches for the 28-foot model to 17 feet 6 inches for the largest size.

MEAT INSPECTION — CHANGE IS COMING

William R. Henning
Associate Professor
Animal Science

In February 1992, Russell Cross took over as administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), which is responsible for meat and poultry inspection. The outlook was bright for positive change as Cross, former professor of meat science at Texas A&M University, laid plans to update meat and poultry inspection, assess the microbial and chemical condition of meat and poultry at all stages of production, and improve a system that was already one of the best in the world.

Optimism waned suddenly earlier this year with illness and deaths of several people from infection with E. coli 0157:H7 — partly traced to ground beef undercooked in a fast-food restaurant. Not only have many Americans changed the way they view the inspection and consumption of meat, but consumer activists and politicians have blasted the system.

New regulations and rules already have resulted from these outbreaks, and talk abounds on the need for even more radical changes. The issue has put a great deal of pressure on the inspection system as well as meat packers and processors across the country.

Current regulations, established under the 1968 Wholesome Meat Act, are specific and strict. Meat inspectors have the authority to halt meat processing any time they believe that facilities or equipment are unsanitary or a product is unsafe. More than two-thirds of USDA's 7,500 inspectors work in slaughter plants where they visually inspect every animal live, and again during slaughter. Any sign of abnormality results in the carcass being condemned (taken out of the human food chain) or retained until laboratory tests prove it is safe.

USDA is trying to move away from visual inspection alone, but they need scientific data to indicate potential problems. Science-based support groups such as chemists and microbiologists within FSIS have increased in number, activity, and sophistication of procedures. Bacterial and residues data have increased as more FSIS laboratories have been equipped with state-of-the-art equipment.

Consumer Expectations

What do consumers really want? Obviously, a safe food supply that doesn't threaten human health. Some consumer groups, however, are calling for meat and poultry products that are pasteurized or even sterile. They seem to want a "magic bullet" against bacterial contamination.

William R. Henning

The industry is appraising the effectiveness of new technology. Mild organic rinses, such as citric acid (as in vinegar), have been approved. But these are only partly effective. Alkaline washes (such as trisodium phosphate) are effective against salmonella. They are approved and widely used in poultry plants.

Procedures such as these will reduce the number of bacteria present, but the numbers of true pathogens (such as E. coli 0157:H7) required to cause serious illness in humans is so low that rinses are not always effective against them.

Sampling for bacteria at the plant level is impractical; it takes too long to test the meat before it is shipped or mixed with trimmings from other carcasses.

Further, while testing each piece of meat is impractical, a sample from one part of the carcass may not indicate contamination elsewhere. Also, in many cases, the product becomes contaminated by humans or equipment in later stages of processing or preparation.

Aside from proper cooking, the only effective way to completely assure freedom from contamination is irradiation. Scientists and health officials have declared irradiation to be effective and safe, but consumer activists continue to raise questions.

Major New Programs

• The Nutrition Labeling and Education Act (NLEA). Although this program was forced on USDA by FDA, companies are going full speed ahead preparing nutrition labels for the July 6, 1994 implementation date. Many are skeptical about whether consumers will read or understand this information.

• The Safe-Handling Label. Just as most processors thought they were ahead of the labeling game, another bomb was dropped in late August requiring safe-handling labels on all fresh meat and poultry. Retailers were miffed at such short notice and have postponed the process though a legal challenge. USDA will start the entire procedure again and should be able to respond to comments and implement the program early in 1994.

• The Zero-Tolerance Program was implemented only after the serious E. coli outbreaks and before much of the beef microbial survey research was completed. FSIS really didn't know what, if any, problems existed. In many ways, this program lends us a false sense of security. Even if we remove every speck of foreign material from the carcass, we haven't necessarily removed all the bacteria.

• HACCP (Hazard Analysis, Critical Control Point) highlights process controls as means to ensure a safe product. It makes sense scientifically, and many plants already are implementing it.

• Microbial standards. Many are calling for microbial standards but opinions vary widely. What causes illness in one person may not in another. Consumers in this country will not allow the meat industry to set a standard for the amount of pathogenic bacteria present in a food — there is zero tolerance. There are many technical problems in implementing such a program.

Change is inevitable. It is coming rapidly within FSIS and, for the most part, looks promising for the consumer. We have a good inspection system, but it will be better.

Agway Reports Profitable Year

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Charles F. Saul, Agway president and CEO, reported the Syracuse-based farm supply cooperative returned to profitability in the first full year of its three-year reengineering program called Customer Driven: 1995.

Agway reported year-end profits of $19.75 million on sales and revenues of $1.7 billion for the 1993 fiscal year that ended June 30. This compares with a fiscal 1992 loss of $58.8 million which includes a $75 million restructuring charge against restated consolidated sales and revenues of $1.8 billion.

"The ability of our employees to deliver superior customer service while being very competitive in the feed and crop needs businesses is already producing positive results", said Saul. "Each of our five basic businesses including agriculture, consumer retailing energy, agricultural leasing, and insurance had profitable operations during the past year."

Saul explained that two subsidiaries, publicly traded Curtice Burns Foods and wholly-owned H.P. Hood, were reported as discontinued operations pending their expected sales during the 1993-1994 fiscal year. Agway announced in March that it was exploring the possibility of selling its approximately 34-percent stake in Curtice Burns and had previously announced plans to sell Hood. Consolidated sales reported in 1992 of $3.2 billion included Curtice Burns and Hood. Agway's 1993 final net margin of $19.75 million includes a net loss of less than $6 million from the two food subsidiaries.

Saul also announced changes in this year's annual meeting dates. Traditionally, the cooperative meeting was held at the end of October in Syracuse, recently at the New York State Fairgrounds. This year, three one-day meetings will be held starting December 1 at the Sheraton in Liverpool, N.Y. Other meetings will be held December 6 at the Springfield, Mass., and December 9 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey, Pa.

Six incumbent directors, nominated earlier in the year, are expected to be officially elected to three-year terms at the Syracuse meeting. They include Peter D. Hanks of Salem, N.Y.; Robert L. Marshman, Oxford, N.Y.; Samuel F. Minor, Washington Pa; Donald E. Pease, Susquehanna, Pa; Carl D. Smith, Corinna, Maine; and Joel L. Wenger, Greencastle, Pa.

Dairy Producers Will Continue National Promotion

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dairy farmers across the United States have voted to continue the National Dairy Promotion Program, following an August referendum.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced Oct. 15 that 71.4 percent of the votes cast were in favor of continuing the National Dairy Promotion Program, which was established under the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 to fund 15 cents per hundredweight to the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board and regional promotion organizations such as Mid East United Dairy Industry Association.

Mid East UDIA receives funding from dairy farmers in Ohio, western Pennsylvania, and parts of West Virginia and northern Kentucky and conducts advertising, marketing and nutrition education programs in these areas.

The National Dairy Board and the United Dairy Industry Association, which represents most state and regional organizations, have formed a coordinated partnership that includes a single marketing plan and one national advertising buy for fluid milk.

The new plan allows for the planning and implementation of one universal message to reach consumers across the United States.

Herman Brubaker, chairman of UDIA and a dairy farmer from West Alexandria, OH, was instrumental in working with NDB to develop the strategy that would allow both organizations to pool dollars to efficiently and effectively utilize the dairy promotion investment.

Other coordinated programs involve cheese, butter, ice cream, nutrition education, product development, market research, consumer information, and school breakfast.

Brubaker, who is also president of the Columbus-Ohio based Mid East UDIA, cites the importance of grassroots promotion and continuing to forge new partnerships.

During UDIA's annual meeting in St. Louis, in October, Brubaker announced, "Our limited resources won't allow for separate schemes, redundant programs and similar strategies . . . the days of division are over."

Bou-Matic Products Among Top 100

MADISON, Wis. — Two Bou-Matic® products were recently honored among the top 100 contributors for the "most significant contributions" to the mechanization of agriculture and construction in the past century.

Bou-Matic, the Dairy Equipment Division of DEC International, was recognized at the Equipment Manufacturers Institute (EMI) Convention recently.

The two Bou-Matic products included the "pipeline milking system" in stanchion and flat barns to increase milk handling efficiency. Bou Matic's "automatic milk detacher" was commercially introduced in 1970, signaling the beginning of automation in milk parlors.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds
BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.
MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.
ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

CUSTOMIN™, CUSTOM BULK MINERALS IN PELLETS

Now Agway makes it possible for any farm to buy custom minerals in bulk. And get them delivered for less cost, less labor, and without the hassles of bags and bag disposal.

Because for the first time ever, pelleted custom mineral mixes are available in bulk. Through a process introduced by Agway, we are now able to process minerals with grain products, to produce pellets that can be delivered to more farms, smaller-size farms—custom-made and formulated for optimal uniformity. With CUSTOMIN™ Bulk Mineral Pellets, delivery, handling and storage are a whole lot easier. CUSTOMIN Bulk Minerals are dust-free, and a lot more cost-effective. They don't cost any more than what you currently pay for minerals. And if you haven't been able to order customized minerals because of quantity requirements, lead time or cost considerations, now you can. CUSTOMIN is only available from Agway. Don't get left holding the bag. Call your local Agway Feed Specialist today. AGWAY®

EBY ALUMINUM FLATBEDS: WE MAKE HARD WORK LOOK GOOD

On the farm or in the city, Eby aluminum flatbed bodies are built for your toughest hauling jobs. Their all-welded construction features 3" aluminum I-beam crossmembers (4" I-beams on bodies 16' and longer) on 12" centers, heavy side rub rail and aluminum diamond floor plate. A full list of options includes slated or solid aluminum sides, tool boxes and tire carrier.

Eby aluminum construction is up to 40% lighter than steel, so you get more payload capacity. The corrosion-resistant aluminum never needs painting and requires minimum maintenance but gives you maximum resale value. That's a winning combination to complement any truck.

In standard lengths to 32 feet and 5 widths from 78 to 102 inches, there's an Eby aluminum flatbed that's matched to your requirements. With Eby value and quality, hard work can look good.

Resources Program Features Pasture Tour

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Rainy weather was certainly not enough to convince farmers and area agency people not to come along on the third annual Susquehanna Co. Fall Pasture Tour.

This year's tour was cosponsored by Sonny Golden of Golden Associates in Springville and the Resources Available to Farmers (ReAF) program, which is one of several Susquehanna Conservation District projects.

Some people travelled from as far north as Canada and as far south as Lancaster and the State College area.

This group of as many as 110 people had two things in mind that day: to view the intensively grazed pastures of five farmers and to speak to these farmers and ask questions. The tour provided a real variety of pasture designs, water systems, and supplemental feeding, but all agreed that intensively managed pastures is the most profitable way to feed dairy cows.

The tour started at the Dean Mack farm in Brooklyn Twp. Mack milks about 70 Holsteins in a freestall setup and supplements his pasture with a total mixed ration (TMR) fed in the barn. Mack has been using rotational grazing for two years. This year he has documented savings averaging 42 percent of feed cost over the pasture season, which included some very hot, dry weather.

The next stop was Dave Lauer's farm in Springville. Lauer has been using rotational grazing for seven years. He has solved his problem of providing water to his cows on pasture by building a trailer with a water tank on it. Also, on this trailer, he keeps a fresh supply of dry hay or balage and minerals. Lauer, like the other farmers visited during this tour, are very conscious of cow comfort. During some of the hottest weather, the cows were allowed to return to the barn early for shade, where they were kept cool with fans.

Daryl Button's farm was the next stop for the day. One of the first things you notice here is that there are no electric fences at all. The next thing you notice is the lush green grasses and clovers on the hillside by the barn. Instead of confining cows in a small area with electric fence, he employs a unique clipping strategy. Each week he mows a small section of the pasture. The cows then have the choice of eating fresh mowed wilted matter or lush regrowth in another spot. Button's only equipment is a tractor, a rotary mower, and a manure spreader. Winter feeding consists of grain and hay, all of which is purchased. Button has one of Susquehanna County's top producing dairy herds while maintaining very low feed costs.

Jim Garner's farm in Montrose has been involved with intensive grazing for three years. Much of the pasture improvement here has been implemented as part of his Chesapeake Bay Program conservation plan. Another integral part of this operation is the manure composting. Much of the manure and bedding is composted and sold bulk to local homeowners. A spring development was installed two years ago, which provides water to each paddock. Garner has minimal equipment and purchases most of his winter feed. He also stresses the importance of grazing a follow-up group behind the milking cows. This leads to better quality pasture and provides very inexpensive feed for heifers or dry cows. During this part of the tour, participants looked at several displays. Duane Pysher from SCS showed many types of fencing materials and gadgets. Wayne Ray, Endless mts. RC&D, demonstrated a Rife water pump.

The last stop of the day was Winston Wright's farm in Rush Twp. The Wright's dairy consists of about 65 milk cows. Prior to setting up this grazing system, the herd had been totally confined. Wright has been experimenting with different seedings to help out during his summer slump. He has tried such things as clovers, tall fescue, mattua, gammagrass, and perennial rye. Wright also told about his experiences raising calves on pasture. They have been feeding milk in New Zealand - style nipple barrel feeders. They have had very comparable results with the calves grown int he barn but with much less labor and lower feed costs.

Processors expect to harvest 596,120 tons of snap beans, down 7 percent from last year and down 22 percent from 1991. Area for harvest, at 184 thousand acres, is down 4 percent from last year and down 21 percent from 1991. The average yield is expected at 3.24 tons per acre, down 4 percent from last year's yield.

Feed Grains Set For Reserve

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Feed grain producers in Berks County plan to enter 107,000 bushels of 1992-crop corn, grain sorghum, and barley in the farmer-owned reserve loan program, according to Richard Troutman, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

USDA authorized up to 900 million bushels of 1992 crop feed grains for entry in the reserve. Eligible farmers had to obtain a regular price support loan and file their intentions to participate by April 30, 1993. During this sign-up period, Berks County farmers filed intentions to place 107,000 bushels of feed grains in the reserve.

An additional sign-up period was later announced and farmers had an opportunity to file additional intentions to participate by August 31, 1993. However, Berks county farmers did not file any additional intentions.

Troutman said a stated intention to place feed grains into the reserve does not obligate the producer to enter the crop into the reserve.

Farmers will earn quarterly storage payments for reserve corn, grain sorghum, and barley at an annual rate of 26.5 cents per bushel. "These payments will be earned until market prices equal or exceed 95 percent of the established target price for these crops," Troutman said. The current target prices per bushel are $2.75 for corn, $2.61 for grain sorghum, and $2.36 for barley.

Signs Remind Farmers About Safety

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — With the harvesting season in full swing on farms, this is no time to forget safety.

Every attempt to remind operators and workers of safety first should be make whenever possible. There are some new warning signs designed to promote safety on farms and other agricultural operations are now available.

The five signs alert farm workers to potential hazards of manure storages, fires in oxygen-limiting silos, pesticide storage areas, and pesticide-treated fields or facilities, said Mr. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering.

One new sign is designed to be placed at each entrance to below-ground or covered manure storages.

"This sign has a simple graphic depicting a person being overcome by deadly manure gases," Murphy said. "You get the point even before you read the words, which warn you to enter the pit only with a self-container air supply, ventilation, rescue harness, and someone standing by with a mechanical lifting device."

Another sign points out the drowning hazards of uncovered manure storages and ponds. The graphic shows a figure falling through the crusted surface of a manure pond.

Farmers with sealed or oxygen-limiting silos can buy signs indicating the explosion hazards using water to fight fires in these structures. One sign is meant to be placed at ground level near the silo blower pipe ladder, while a second should be placed next to the silo unloader.

"The two remaining signs address pesticide safety concerns," said Murphy. "One is designed to be posted at each entrance to a facility or field where pesticides with reentry restrictions have recently been applied. Because this sign will be used at fields and facilities such as mushroom houses, which employ many Hispanic workers, its warnings are in both English and Spanish."

The final sign, to be placed at each entrance to pesticide storage facilities, warns people that they are entering a pesticide storage area and that fire in such a facility will produce toxic fumes.

Each 10-by-14-inch warning sign is made of .040 gauge aluminum with a reflective surface designed to resist fading for up to seven years. Each costs $5, or $4.75 in quantities of 100 or more, plus shipping charges.

To order signs, or to get more information, contact D.W. Miller Industires, Inc., R.D. 1, Box 7B, Huntingdon, PA 16652. Pennsylvania residents can call (800) 222-1980 and others can call (800) 331-3812.

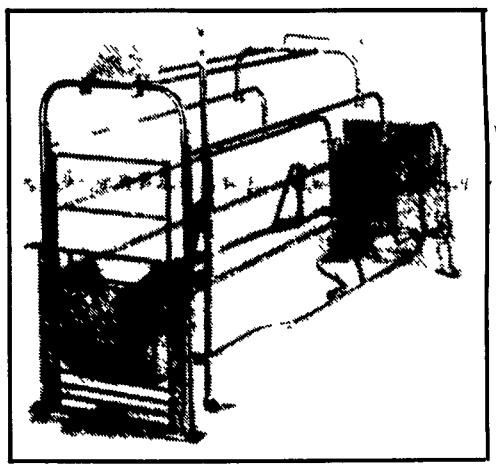
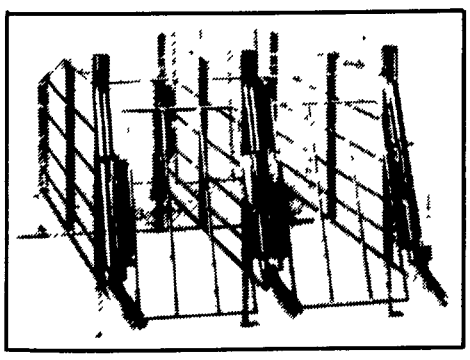
PIG SAVER "DUTCH CRATE"

Developed through testing in our research farms the goal was to develop a crate that nearly eliminates crushing, due to lay ons, unmatched durability and be easy to work around. All this has been achieved by a unique gravity flip-prail that forces sows to lie down slowly and using stainless steel for rear doors and legs, proven horizontal and solid steel rod construction. All this at a reasonable cost. Crate also can be installed on an angle.



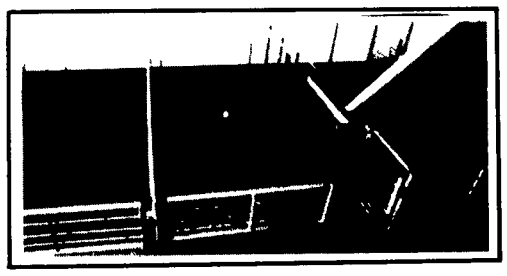


CONFINEMENT STALL

Developed recently in our R&D farm. Our goals were convenience, safety and durability. The low back and flat top rails are easy to reach over with no sharp edges. Stainless steel rear legs and front feet along with solid steel horizontal rods through punched uprights provide the strongest, most durable stall ever produced by Tri-County (21"-24" O.C. x 86")

NURSERY PENNING

Nursery penning has been improved by the use of an optional solid stainless steel panel on the front gates which keeps walkways clean. Stainless steel verticals on penning eliminates corrosion where penning attaches to the floor. Stainless steel drinker pipes & mounting brackets also increase durability.



FINISHING PENNING

Optional stainless steel verticals and fasteners offer improved durability over other similar types of penning. Loop and flapper latch arrangement eliminates the use of drop pins. Stainless steel fence line feeders provide excellent durability and a minimum of waste.

Students May Be Eligible For Scholarship Program

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — The Cargill Foundation will sponsor $1,000 scholarships for 250 high school seniors from U.S. farm families for the ninth year this spring.

The Cargill Scholarship Program for Rural America is open to all high school seniors who will graduate in the spring. The seniors must come from families that derive at least half of their income from farming. Scholarship candidates must enroll full-time next fall at an accredited two- or four-year college, university or vocational-technical school.

"The program has helped to honor academic achievement among rural students," said Bill Pearce, president of the Cargill Foundation. "It's an endeavor that has received an enthusiastic reception in rural communities. We are committed to this scholarship program."

The Cargill Foundation established the program in 1986 to recognize and encourage academic achievement, accomplishment, and talent among rural youth. Thus far, the Cargill Foundation has presented 1,503 awards for a total of $1.75 million.

The national FFA selects the scholarship winners, although applicants do not have to be members of FFA. The organization bases its selections on academic record, leadership, extracurriculur accomplishments, and financial need.

"The FFA has a long history of administering scholarship programs for agriculturally-based companies," said Gladys Tripp of Cargill community relations. "Because it is an national organization that is part of the curriculum in many rural high schools, it is ideally suited to manage the program."

Information and application forms can be obtained at any Cargill office or high school FFA department. Students also may request forms from the Cargill scholarship coordinator, National FFA, P.O. Box 45205, Madison, Wis., 53744-5205. The application deadline is February 15, 1994.

Conservancy Staff Attends Trust Rally

WYOMISSING (Berks Co.) — Phoebe Hopkins and Ann Orth, representing the Berks County Conservancy, joined more than 650 other volunteers and professionals from throughout the nation at Rally '93, America's largest land conservation conference. Sponsored by the Land Trust Alliance, the event was held September 29 to October 3 at Big Sky, Mont.

During the conference, Hopkins, executive director of the Conservancy, and Orth, director of land projects, had an opportunity to tour land protection projects in Montana and Wyomissing, attend workshops and training sessions that build skills needed in land conservation, and share information with other land trust members from across the country. Orth described the Rally as "inspiring."

Jean Hocker, president of the Land Trust Alliance, the national organization for land trusts, said, "The Berks County Conservancy and other organizations at the Rally each represent areas of the country where people are taking positive action to make their communities better places to live.

"At the Rally, trusts learned proven techniques that conserve land. Combining these skills with land trusts' inherent determination, entrepreneurship, and dedication creates a powerful conservation force. It's no wonder land trusts have been so successful and have experienced such tremendous growth."

There are approximately 1,000 land trusts in the United States. Together they have helped protect more than three million acres of wetlands, natural areas, wildlife habitat, farmland, and other open space. Like the Berks County Conservancy, these groups are independent, local or regional nonprofit organizations directly involved in land conservation.

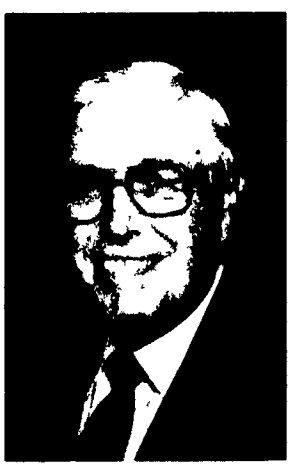
More Than $129 Million in Extra Payments

"At Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, our mission is to maximize returns to members. In the past six years, we returned more than $129 million to members in equity payments, over-order premiums and quality bonuses. That's an average of $36,600 per member. And these extra dollars are continuing at the rate of $1.7 million a month.



Robert B. McSparran

Japan's Demand For Convenience Food Helps Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker sees a growing demand for convenience food in Japan as a real opportunity for Maryland food businesses. Maryland produces many ready-to-eat and easy-to-prepare food products that the Japanese are now embracing.

"I think there is tremendous growth potential in the Japanese market for Maryland food companies. They want what we produce. We are making excellent progress in getting into the Japanese market, and I think the amount of our exports will continue to expand," Walker said.

In recent months Maryland firms have sent wine; live and frozen soft shell crabs; crab soups, cakes and nuggets; clams, clam soups and juices; spices; and frozen whole chickens and portions to the Japanese. In the spring Walker met with a group of Japanese businessmen at an international food show where they expressed strong interest in purchasing more Maryland food products.

"It takes a lot of hard work to get into the Japanese market, but once the contacts are made the potential for rewards is great. I look for the Japanese to look increasingly to Western style convenience food products to keep up with their busy lifestyles," said Walker.

According to the Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, sales of precooked takeout food in Japan totaled $40.9 billion in 1991, and are expected to reach $95.2 billion by the year 2000. They suggest that as more Japanese eat on the run, U.S. food producers give serious consideration to this expanding market.

Harvester Has Self-Contained Hydraulics

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case has introduced a new Category III forage harvester, the Case International 8750.

"People in the industry know that forage harvesters haven't changed much in the last decade," said Dave Hess, Case product manager-hay and forage. "But the 8750 features several innovations that increase productivity and convenience. The most important is the self-contained hydraulic system."

The hydraulic system supplies power to drive the feedrolls and attachments. The tongue of the machine serves as the hydraulic reservoir for the self-contained system, and the system pump is belt-driven from the tractor PTO.

"Because of this setup, theoretical cut length can be infinitely adjusted between 3/16 and 5/8 of an inch," said Hess. "All a farmer needs to do is move an indicator to the desired position. This varies the pump output flow and changes the speed of the feedroll drive motor — faster for long cuts, slower for shorter cuts. There are no sprockets to change. No machine with mechanical drive is as easy to adjust."

According to Hess, the ability to accurately control cut-length uniformity results in better silo loading, packing and unloading. "It also helps provide consistent, optimum feed quality to promote milk production and improve livestock health."

Another advantage of the self-contained hydraulic system is that it provides built-in overload protection, with no need to adjust slip clutches or stop and change shear bolts. The feedrolls stop when the hydraulic system exceeds relief pressure. Hess noted that the cutterhead, auger, and blower are mechanically driven for maximum utilization of available power from today's high-horsepower tractors.

The 8750 has three-row capacity and is available with a 150 or 200 PTO horsepower driveline. For many operations, the surface area of the tongue on the 8750 provides adequate heat dissipation so supplemental hydraulic cooling is not required. But in high-capacity, long-duration operations, an oil cooler, which is standard equipment on machines with the 200-horsepower driveline, keeps operating temperatures down. A field-installed cooler option is available for units with the 150-horsepower driveline.

The cutterhead is 18 inches in diameter and 22 inches wide, with 10 spiral knives that make 10,000 cuts per minute. The shear bar has a 1.25 x 2-inch cross-section — larger than competitive models, according to Hess. "This means less deflection under heavy loads, a cleaner cut, longer knife wear and reduced power requirements. The shear bar is reversible and easy to adjust, and that means the farmer will get longer use out of it," he said.

The optional metal detector available for the 8750 detects ferrous metals and stops the feedrolls before foreign objects can enter the cutterhead. This reduces the possibility of downtime and costly repairs, and helps protect livestock.

If the feedrolls stop, either because of metal detection or overload, the operator simply flips a toggle switch to hydraulically reverse the direction of the feedrolls and attachment head and back the crop out. "The hydraulic feedroll drive design eliminates the need for electric clutches or gear boxes which are mechanically shifted," said Hess.

"We designed this forage harvester with an ear to our customers," he said. "More than anything, they want productivity, dependability and ease of use. The 8750 reflects that input."

Among other features, it has a central lubrication bank for 16 difficult-to-access feedroll bearing and pivot points. And it has a simple, effective knife-sharpening system that requires no tools. Knives are sharpened when cutterhead direction is reversed.

Hydraulic tongue swing is standard, and a convenient, remotely positioned grip-type handle with fingertip switches provides electro-hydraulic control of attachment head height, spout rotation, and of the spout deflector.

The 8750 comes with a choice of optional two- and three-row heads for 30- and 38-inch row spacing, as well as a 7-foot-wide windrow pickup head. To complement these heads, the forage harvester features four-point mounting with two quick-latches, electro-hydraulic raising and lowering of the head, and convenient adjustment of header height and header drop rate.

Because the attachment head and cutterbox pivots around the centerline of the cutterhead shaft, the relationship between the attachment and feedrolls stays constant.

The Case International 8750 forage harvester is in limited production this year, with full availability for the 1994 season.

The self-contained hydraulic system on the Case International 8750 forage harvester supplies power to the feedrolls, making it possible to provide uniform, clean cuts through an infinitely variable range of lengths.

Conference To Explore Use Of Conservation Reserve Acres

ANKENY, Iowa — What use farmers will make of the 36.5 million acres of cropland enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) once their contracts expire and what options federal policymakers may exercise to keep at least some CRP acres out of crop production over the longer term will be discussed at a national conference on February 10-11, 1994, in Arlington, Va.

The conference, "When Conservation Reserve Program Contracts Expire... The Policy Options," is being sponsored by the Soil and Water Conservation Society (SWCS) in cooperation with several government agencies and many of the nation's leading conservation and agricultural organizations. Participants will include federal and state policymakers, government program managers, and representatives of environmental and agricultural organizations.

The conference program will examine how well the CRP has achieved its multiple purposes; how farmers say they plan to use their CRP acres once their contracts expire; and given federal budget limitations, what options might be available to policymakers for perpetuating the environmental and other benefits achieved with the CRP over the past eight years.

The CRP was created in 1985. Under the program, farmers are paid an annual rental fee for retiring highly erodible and other environmentally fragile land from crop production for a period of 10 years. In return, they must establish and maintain a permanent soil-conserving cover of grass or trees on the retired acres for the life of the contract.

No decisions have been made yet on whether farmers now participating in the CRP will be offered contract extensions or other incentives to keep their land out of crop production beyond the 10 years covered by the existing contracts. Contracts on about 24 million CRP acres are due to expire between 1995 and 1997.

Many environmental groups are concerned about the loss of natural resource benefits in the form of soil erosion control, wildlife habitat enhancement, and water quality protection if the CRP acres revert to crop production following contract expiration. Farm groups, on the other hand, worry about what impact bringing millions of CRP acres back into crop production may have on agricultural commodity supplies and prices.

The conference which will be held at the Arlington Renaissance Hotel, will provide a forum to discuss what policies are needed to achieve, on a longer term basis, many of the CRP's original environmental protection and commodity supply control objectives.

A preliminary conference program will be circulated in November.

For more information about the conference, write or call SWCS, 7515 Northeast Ankeny Road, Ankeny, Iowa 50021-9764, (515) 289-2331 or (800) The Soil.

NEW AT BINKLEY & HURST BROS. FROM SUNFLOWER:

MODEL 4010/4110

SUNFLOWER®

COULTER RIPPER

Conservation Tillage Equipment Built SUNFLOWER Tough!

Sunflower's Coulter Ripper is for today's conservation minded farmer demanding deep tillage with minimal residue disturbance. These durable machines feature adjustable front mounted coulters on 7½" centers. The coulter blades have an added advantage of slicing hard ground to keep clod size to a minimum. The V-bar ripper design gives added trash clearance and pulls smoother than straight-bar rippers. These coulter rippers are built Sunflower tough and no ballast is added to the frame increasing the structural strength. Check out Sunflower's latest edition to its growing family of quality tillage equipment at a farm show or dealer near you.

Adjustable Coulter Gangs: The 4010/4110 both feature adjustable coulter gangs that can be raised completely in clean ground. Ratchet Jack Adjustment is standard equipment. Optional Hydraulic Gang Adjustment makes on the go changes or raising the coulters completely out of the way an easy task from the tractor seat.

There's nothing more important to a crop than early, even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheel and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers.

If It's Snow Removal Or Heavy Duty Excavating, You Need A Rhino Blade From Binkley & Hurst Bros. Now!

RHINO

For over 50 years, Rhino has been manufacturing the leading line of rear-mounted blades. Throughout this time, our expertise in design and manufacturing techniques has enabled us to satisfy over 300,000 blade owners across the country. Over the years, we have expanded our manufacturing technology in order to continue building RHINO blades with superior craftsmanship and innovative designs. This dedication for quality assures you of the best when you buy a RHINO blade. Today, our investment is paying off for you.

Moldboards. An important factor in the performance of RHINO blades is the precision-formed moldboard with the exact curvature necessary to achieve maximum penetration. This added precision allows RHINO blades to cut and roll the soil rather than dragging, which saves time, horsepower, and fuel.
The 1540 with 8' moldboard is available for tractors rated to 190 PTO HP and with 10' moldboard for tractors rated to 160 PTO HP.
The Rhino 900 and 950 blades are both available to be equipped with several sizes of moldboards for your specific job requirements. For tractors rated to 125 PTO HP, the 900 and 950 are available with a 7' or 8' moldboard. For those with tractors rated to 95 PTO HP, a 7', 8', or 9' moldboard is available.
The cutting edges of all RHINO blades are ½ "x6" high-carbon steel, grader cutting edges. The cutting edges have off-center countersunk bolt holes which give you full life of the blade without wearing into the moldboard, and you don't have to reverse the cutting edge in order to gain maximum life. Unlike some center-punched blades, the off-center punch enables the cutting edge to assume the same curvature as the moldboard, allowing a free upward flow of dirt. This unrestricted flow produces less drag, with better fuel economy. That is, the dirt slides upward and breaks at the top of the moldboard.

The Rhino cutting edge is the same as used on many motor graders. RHINO blades are designed with the strength, ruggedness, and movements to do many jobs of a motor grader quickly and easily. You will be proud of the volume of material that you can move with your tractor and a RHINO blade.

Soil Compaction IS a PROBLEM on every farm we've checked... DMI Subsoil Tillage Systems help eliminate soil compaction - making your fields produce more crops.

1) Breaking up the compaction layer decreases soil runoff in wet years, by permitting water to percolate into the subsoil.
2) Breaking up the compaction layer makes room for plant root systems to seek and find moisture in dry years.

THE CROP IS YOUR $ CASH $

Everything you work for — tilling ground, planting seed, spraying or cultivating — depends upon Harvesting your CROP and getting it sold!

NOTHING HARVESTS CROPS LIKE A case IH Axial-Flow Combine!

HERE'S 4 REASONS WHY!

- Get in the field earlier - and stay later - because the Axial Flow Combine's specialty rotor separates grain from wet, damp material better than the competition. You get more done in less days than with a conventional combine.

- Grain from an Axial Flow combine is worth more, because it is damaged less and the sample is cleaner than from a conventional combine. (Food Corn growers PREFER Axial Flow for this reason.)

MAINTENANCE

- The single rotor design eliminates the straw walker assembly and all the problems that go with all those bearings and vibration. All of the threshing and separating system parts are easy to get to, making maintenance a simple routine.

HOOBER SERVICE

- Don Carper and his (6) combine technicians work on combines 12 months of the year. They have started over 250 Axial Flow combines in all kinds of crops and conditions. Their knowledge and concern for your problems keep you running when you want to run.

- High-density polyethylene (HDPE) floor.
- Lifetime Bonded Protection warranty.

SMOOTH PRODUCTIVITY

A New Holland skid-steer loader gets more work done on steep slopes. The low center of gravity and long wheelbase make for a smoother ride, so you can run up a slope empty and come down with a full bucket. And the bucket stays full because there's less bouncing. Don't try that with an ordinary skid-steer loader!

Stop in and find out just how good a skid-steer loader can be.

CONCRETE REASONS WHY A NEW POURED CONCRETE SILO IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT...

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

A. Enhancement of cash flow. Improved forage quality results in consistent, and increased milk production.

B. "Safe Silo" Our silos meet or exceed industry standards, reducing/protecting lender liability.

C. Initial Cost. Used or cheap pre-fab silos may have a lower initial cost, but based upon useful life, the new poured concrete silo will have a lower annual cost: due to longer life and lower maintenance costs.

D. Residual Value. Our new, poured concrete silos are built for "generations of use", and enhance the future value of the farm.

E. Storage Losses Reduced. Poured concrete silos consistently out-perform all other methods of storing and preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.

F. Protecting Forage Quality. Oxygen and heat cause the most damage to stored silage and haylage. Our poured concrete silos are the very best system to PROTECT YOUR FORAGE QUALITY... "NOBODY PROTECTS FORAGE QUALITY LIKE WE DO...NOBODY"

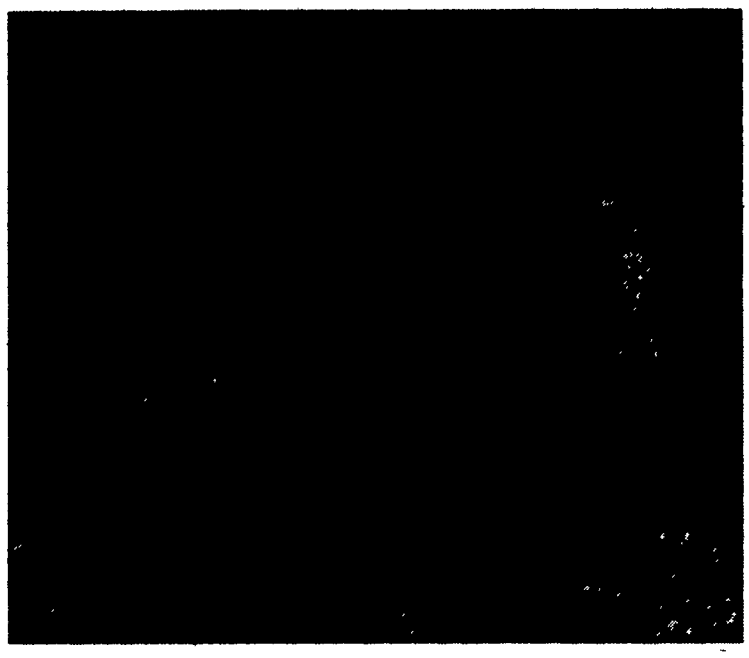
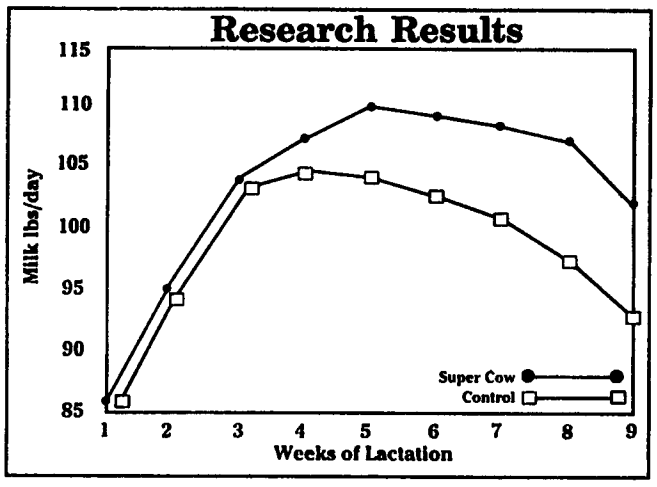
PURINA SUPERCOW



A dairy feed that could make your cows more productive, while also improving their feed conversion and breeding efficiency.

SUPERCOW is a blend of high fat nuggets and pellets specially designed and manufactured by Purina to deliver feed quality, nutrient density and super palatability. The nutrient-rich blend is placed with complete nutrition and is highly palatable.

In field trials, cows fed SUPERCOW produced an average of 6.7 pounds more milk per cow per day, while improving or maintaining milk composition. And while production increased, the cows that were fed SUPERCOW maintained or improved their body-condition scores after freshening and were more-feed efficient.



| Research Results | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Milk lbs/day | Milk Fat lbs/day | Milk Protein lbs/day |
| Control Average Production | 100 | 3.24 | 2.83 |
| Super Cow Average Production | 107 | 3.47 | 2.86 |
| Average Improvement Per Cow | +7 | +.23 | +.03 |

Consider All The Benefits Of SUPERCOW:

- Increased milk production
- Good milk composition
- Good body condition
- Improved feed efficiency
- Improved breeding efficiency
- More income opportunity!
